War on 'Pirates'

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Sept. 2.—Great Britain and France, clearing the decks of their mightiest warships for action, tonight declared open war on "submarine pirates" in the Mediterranean after two more ships—one British and one Russian—were torpedoed and sunk.

Only 12 hours after an attempt by a mystery submarine—openly suspected of being Italian—to sink the British destroyer Havock off the Spanish east coast, the British freighter Woodford was sunk by a submarine near the same spot.

The freighter sank almost immediately, carrying to death the second engineer. Nine of the crew of 32 were wounded.

The Russian cargo steamer Molangoyeff was reported tonight to have been sunk in Greek waters by an unidentified "pirate" submarine. One Russian sailor was reported killed. The Molangoyeff was said to have been en route to France with a cargo of bitumen.

Torpedo Hits Lifeboat.

The submarine was said to have fired a warning torpedo, after which the crew abandoned ship and took to their lifeboats. A second torpedo sank the ship and a third struck one of the lifeboats, killing the sailor, reports said.

It was announced in Moscow last night the Soviet government was investigating circumstances of a "monstrous crime" in the torpedoing and sinking of the Soviet freighter Timiriazev off Algiers last Monday, allegedly by an Italian submarine.

It was reported tonight in reliable quarters the determination of Generalissimo Franco to cut off all oil supplies from his loyalist enemies in Spain lies beneath the series of attacks.

It was said Franco, with the support of Italy and Germany, has embarked on a daring policy of sea raids as a short cut to winning the war.

The plan was said to be aided by a smooth-functioning espionage system covering all European ports from which oil tankers have sailed. The spies flash descriptions of the departing tankers and they are run down when they approach the Spanish coast.

13 Seamen Safe, 1 Swims 25 Miles After Shipwreck

Panama City, Fla., Sept. 2 (AP).—Addley Baker, 25-year-old seaman, stumbled to the beach today after a 26-hour swim through heavy seas and gasped out a story of a shipwreck 25 miles off shore in which the freighter Tarpon sank with 25 aboard.

Coast Guard cutters and airplanes tonight had rescued nine members of the Tarpon's crew and recovered the bodies of two. Three swam ashore just before nightfall and the rescue fleet scoured the sea for the remainder.

The body of Capt. W. G. Barrow, 83-year-old master of the vessel, was recovered.

U. S. Ace Taken By Franco and Reported Shot

The State Department yesterday revealed it was investigating a report that Harold E. Dahl, American aviator shot down near Madrid by Spanish rebels on July 12, had been court-martialed and sentenced to death in Spain.

Dahl served four months as a volunteer with the Spanish loyalist air forces. He was taken prisoner when he bailed out of his disabled plane by parachute and was confined in Salamanca prison.

Several days ago word came to the American diplomatic officials in Spain that Dahl had been executed. The State Department ordered an inquiry. Although both Dahl's mother, Mrs. Ida Dahl, of Champaign, Ill., and his wife of six months have requested this Government to intercede for his freedom, such action has not been taken.

Obligation Disavowed.

The State Department does not feel it has any duty to seek the release of Americans who voluntarily enter the fighting forces of foreign nations, especially in view of the fact that American authorities months ago warned Americans against volunteering for such services. Nevertheless an official inquiry is now being made.

Dahl, a former officer in the reserve corps of the United States Army Air Service, was alive and well on July 22, William P. Carney, New York Times correspondent in Spain reported. On that day Carney interviewed Dahl in the Salamanca prison, spending almost two hours alone with the prisoner, he reported in a cable to the Times.

Carney quoted Dahl as saying that "my amazement that I am still alive is almost equaled by the way I feel about the kindness and consideration I am receiving as a prisoner of war."

Flew Russian Plane.

The New York Times correspondent said Dahl explained he offered his services to the loyalist government because of the fat pay dangled before him for such activities and not because he had any political sympathies with them.

He was quoted as explaining that he received a Spanish passport in Mexico in the name of Hernandez Diaz—thus retaining the initials "H. D." of his real name. Dahl or Diaz told Carney, the latter wrote, that he was assigned in Madrid to a Russian flying squadron and took part in their maneuvers. The day he was shot down he was flying a Russian-made plane.

A.F. of L. Asks Churches to Fight Lewis

Green 'Christian Patriot,' Declares the Leader of Movement.

The Labor Front

A drive to enlist church support for the American Federation of Labor was opened here.

John L. Lewis said he will assail public officials for their attitude in recent strikes, in a radio speech he will deliver tonight.

American Federation of Labor leaders renewed attacks on the National Labor Relations Board for its alleged pro-Committee on Industrial Organization bias and intimated a new Supreme Court test awaits the board.

In San Francisco, cargoes piled up on docks as a C. I. O.-A. F. L. maritime labor quarrel took more men off jobs. Crews of four vessels struck at Baltimore.—Page 6.

The A. F. L. executive council, meeting at Atlantic City, asked loyal unions to help Pacific Coast truck drivers in their feud with C. I. O. longshoremen.

Green Aided

A drive for church support for the American Federation of Labor in its contest for American labor supremacy with the Committee for Industrial Organization was revealed here last night on the eve of a speech today by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. generalissimo, when Lewis will denounce public officials who "used the forces of government against labor."

The clerical campaign on behalf of the A. F. L. was announced by the Rev. Ralph E. Nollner, national chairman of the America Forward movement, who said 100,000 copies of America Forward, publication of the movement, will be sent to clergymen, "half of the total clergymen in the United States," Nollner said.

Nollner announced also that Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and Representative Samuel B. Pettingill (Democrat), of Indiana, will write for the next issue. Burke's subject will be "Thomas Jefferson and Religious Liberty" and Pettingill's will be "Religious Liberty and the Constitution."

"Jesus and Labor" Topic.

The principal article in this issue is entitled "William Green—American." Included also are an editorial entitled "Co-operation," urging "peace in industry"; a message from Green declaring for "the American way" of settling labor disputes, and an article on "Jesus and Labor" by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer here.

America Forward does not name the C. I. O. In the course of the article on Green, however, the author says:

"As we move toward the zero hour of world crisis, with liberty mounting the judgment seat of the nations for ordeal and trial, we give thanks that the American Federation of Labor is still American and William Green, Christian patriotic, is at the helm. But for him, who shall say how far organized labor, the heritage of that great American, Samuel Gompers, would be on the road to Moscow? Now we have the assurance that the leadership of American labor, the only labor leadership which is acceptable generally to our churches, is standing firm and steady for constitutional government, law observance, and peace in industry."

"Confronted with the same problem which darkened the closing years of the administration of Samuel Gompers, the overmastering per-

The Sino-Japanese War.

The Japanese "big push" on Shanghai bogged down before desperate Chinese resistance, and the Japanese were reported falling back along the Shanghai front.

Unconfirmed reports said Chinese bombing planes had bombarded Kagoshima on the Japanese island of Kyushu.

Japanese charged Soviet Russia has supplied 210 war planes to the Chinese and that many of them already have been delivered to air bases in North China.

Japanese Retreat.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 2.—The Japanese "big push" on Shanghai bogged down today before desperate Chinese resistance, and the Japanese forces, heavily outnumbered, were reported giving ground all along the Shanghai front.

While some of the fiercest fighting of the undeclared war raged along the Yangtze River, where Japanese were attempting to land additional units of the powerful home army to bolster their wavering lines, big Chinese bombing planes rained death on Japanese positions along the river.

Ten Chinese bombers from bases west of Soochow inflicted heavy losses on Japanese forces which had gained a footing on the southern bank of the Yangtze and returned unscathed. Chinese planes also bombed the air base the Japanese army recently established on Tsungming Island, in the Yangtze Estuary.

Landing 200 Big Guns.

The Chinese aerial activity seriously dislocated Japanese plans to land a huge expedition along the Yangtze shore for the "big push" inland.

Japanese officers said 200 big guns were being landed to blast a way through the Chinese defenses, and that the drive on Shanghai would resume as soon as the way was clear.

Meanwhile, unconfirmed reports circulated that Chinese bombing planes had carried the war to Japan and bombarded Kagoshima, on the southern island of Kyushu. However, Japanese officials in Tokyo and Kagoshima denied the raid had taken place.

Augusta in Danger.

Kagoshima, a city of 137,000 at the southern tip of Kyushu, is about 600 miles in direct line from Nanking, probably the nearest Chinese air base.

At the same time, Chinese shells fell dangerously near the cruiser Augusta, flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet, in a heavy bombardment directed at the Japanese cruiser Idzumo.

Giant howitzers in Pootung, industrial section across the Whangpoo River from the International Settlement, burst into action against the battle-scarred Idzumo. Many of 'National Figure' to Head Medium-Price Drive, Company Says.

The report that Postmaster General James A Farley would resign from the Roosevelt Cabinet to become chief executive of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corporation was again to the forefront last night

Pierce-Arrow announced it was about to enter the medium-priced automobile field, and that the program would be under the direction of "a person of national importance."

After relating how a meeting of the stockholders voted full approval of a plan and for the sale of 1,300,000 shares of stock in a new corporation, the company's statement added:

"Interest at the meeting was directed not only to plans of the Pierce-Arrow Co. to enter the medium-price automobile field, with volume production contemplated, but even more pointedly toward the identity of the individual who will direct the new company.

"A. J. Chanter, president of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corporation, was questioned during the meeting about the report that Postmaster General James A. Farley will become the chief executive of Pierce-Arrow. He declined to amplify his recent statement that it contemplated "a person of national importance will be invited to become the executive head of the new corporation.'"

False Ceiling Yields Huge Opium Cache On the Manhattan

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—In a false ceiling on the S. S. Manhattan, a Federal squad today discovered 60 pounds of opium.

It had been concealed there, said Assistant United States Attorney Joseph P. Martin, by the ship's master-at-arms, Stephen Frank Kryszak, alias Frank Cusich.

The narcotic, the special agent said, probably had been hauled back and forth since November, the ship having long been under close watch. It was the second major opium seizure on the Manhattan.

Kryszak is under indictment for smuggling and violation of the narcotics laws.

West May Attempt Ohio Nomination For Governorship

By the Associated Press.

Thousands Die, Ships Smashed In China Storm

Big Vessels Swept Ashore, Ships Sunk With Crews at Hongkong

By the United Press.

Hongkong, (Friday) Sept. 3.—A typhoon that roared in off the China Sea, tumbling ocean-going liners and warships against wharves and ripping through the city with a death toll estimated in the thousands, early today left this British colony a shambles.

The dead were estimated at 1,000 to 3,000, and rescue crews, digging through collapsed buildings where fire added to the horror of the storm, continued to pile up a staggering toll.

Honkgong harbor, packed with refugee ships from the Shanghai war area, was littered with wreckage. A 2,000-ton Chinese steamer The On Lee was smashed against the British cruiser Suffolk with such violence that 12 of its crew were hurled on the Suffolk's deck.

The On Lee, swept on, crashed against the British destroyer Duchess and finally rammed through a wharf to pile up several yards ashore.

The British passenger steamer Lausang was reported sunk, and several others were washed ashore. The Japanese transpacific liner Azama Maru was swept ashore, with 15 of its crew killed and a score injured.

Tugboats which went to the rescut of the Dutch motorship Van Heutsez, driven on an island in the harbor, said the water was cluttered with dead and dying Chinese. Scores caught aboard smaller craft were dumped into the water and drowned.

The peril of cholera, which has taken 1,175 lives since July 20, was increased by the disruption of water mains.

U. S. to Cash In on Greenbelt After 'Renting' It 237 Years

Rents and utility rates that would enable the Government to get back its $14,227,000 investment in Greenbelt in approximately 237 years were announced yesterday by the Farm Security Administration—successor to the Resettlement Administration, which fathered the "model community" proect.

Income from the 885 homes and garages was estimated at $424,243 annually, of which the surplus above operating costs was given at $60,000.

Rentals will range from $18 to $41 per month, with the average being $31.23, including heat and water. This will average $5.90 per room a month, exclusive of the anticipated average of $1.21 a month for water and $3.18 for electricity.

All commercial services of the community will be operated by the Consumer Distribution Corporation, financed by Edward A. Filene. The administration emphasized yesterday, however, that the residents of the settlement will have the final

Denver, Sept. 2.—Maybelle Outcalt, 15, one of two girl victims of infantile paralysis for whom artificial breathing devices were rushed to Denver from the East, died today in Denver General Hospital.

Maybelle, who, with 2-year-old Shirley Krause shared Denver's only "iron lung" respirator until two arrived by airplane and train today.

Shirley, who had occupied the "iron lung" most of the time for three weeks, virtually gave up its use to the Outcalt girl last night. She was placed in a wooden respirator when it arrived from Toronto and then transferred to the "iron lung" which came from Chicago.

Shirley had remained outside the hospital's "iron lung"—until today the only one of its kind in the mountain region—all night, desperately forcing her partially paralyzed muscles to operate her lungs.

The surviving girl called for food today. That, Dr. T. L. Williams explained, was almost a sure sign she had weathered the waiting period.

Roosevelt Advises Two New District Airports in Veto of Improvement Bill

Message Says Nation Should Own Field Here

Suggests Nearby Development and High Port for Foggy Weather.

President Roosevelt yesterday vetoed the May-Copeland bill to improve Washington Airport on the ground that "the principal aviation field of the National Capital should not be owned or controlled by any private corporation."

Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, declined to comment. "Whether we will make some improvement, anyway, is a matter for our board to consider," he said.

The fight for an adequate airport here has lasted ten years. The President said, "After careful consideration, I am of the belief that the Gravelly Point site should be developed for use in all good weather when there are no river fogs or bad flying conditions. This site is within ten minutes of the center of Washington. It could be used by the large transport planes on probably 80 per cent of all flying days."

The veto parallels the recommendation of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, of which the President's uncle, Frederic A. Delano, is chairman. The commission objected to filling Boundary Channel lagoon to enlarge the landing field. The Department of Agriculture objected to leasing 53 acres of the Arlington Experimental Farm to the terminal.

In his veto statement, after pointing out that the present field is subject to fogs, the President declared that even if 53 acres were taken from the Experimental Farm, the airport would still be one of the "poorest fields in the entire nation for large planes carrying passengers and mail."

Furthermore, he said, the bill provides for the closing of an important highway leading to the heart of the Capital and for the lease of Government land for 50 years to a private corporation. This, he added, was sufficient justification for disapproving the bill.

The President declared that air traffic to and from Washington was so important that the Federal Government "could well afford two fields." Not only should the field at Gravelly Point be constructed in accordance with the plans developed by the Park and Planning Commission, but an additional field, on high land, not subject to fogs, should be built for use on days when unsafe flying conditions prevailed along the Potomac River, the President said.

At the time of the enactment of the May-Copeland bill the Senate had already passed a bill providing for development of an airport at Camp Springs, Md., with Federal funds. However, no further action was taken.

Members of the Airport Commission, which chose the site at Camp Springs, have declared that more than half the options on the land there have already expired, and the remainder will run out before Congress reassembles.

Insured Health Is New Deal's Next Objective

Sen. Wagner to Introduce Meaure to Assure Medical Care.

As the next step in the Administration's long-time program of social security, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, will introduce at the next session of Congress a bill to provide for health insurance, it was learned last night.

Indications were the Social Security Board is, now, almost as cool toward the proposal as the medical profession is heatedly against it.

Board officials would not comment publicly as to their attitude, but it was understood they feel the board has all the problems it can handle efficiently without embarking on such a mammoth undertaking as health insurance probably would be.

Details of Bill Indefinite.

Wagner has not worked out details, it was understood, and is not yet certain whether to place in it provisions for Government compensation for sickness, or Government compensation for medical care, or Government-provided medical care, or all these.

The country's physicians and surgeons are believed to be nearly unanimous in disapproval. Their opposition is based on what it might do to the medical profession. Many of them point to the situation in England, where, they say, less successful doctors are brought into government service at low salaries and allowed to administer free medical service to low-income groups.

Surveys and studies of the work in British clinics have agreed on its inefficiency, costliness to the government and on its low standards, it was asserted. Yet, doctors point out, if standards are raised substantially the cost to the taxpayer immediately skyrockets. For these reasons, the profession is on the whole against such measures.

Board Is "Unwilling."

The board's viewpoint is not one of unwillingness to begin such a tremendous task under the present set-up. It was admitted that board studies are being made, but only incidentally as part of the vast program of general social research begun when the program was launched. No action is expected to be recommended to the President, it was said.

Wagner's belief is said to be that health insurance is a vital part of any social security program; that the Nation's workers would contribute gladly to funds that would guarantee them compensation for sickness and free medical care; and that socialized medicine is inevitable in any long-term planning to bring more privileges to "the submerged third."

The Administration is not expected to press for immediate action by the next Congress, it was believed, but will be satisfied if some sound measure along these lines is enacted in the next few years to begin a cautious approach to the problem.

H. G. Wells Hits OutmodedStyle Of Educators

'Refit Learning to Modern Life,' He Urges; Pleads for Enlightenment.

By the Associated Press.

Nottingham, England, Sept. 2.—H. G. Wells appealed to educators today to refit learning to modern life so that "new citizens" will understand the forces that govern them.

Wells, speaking as president of the educational science section of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, deplored antiquated methods and emphasis of education.

"We have no time to waste," he warned, "if our schools are not to go on delivering, year by year, fresh hordes of ignorant, unbalanced, uncritical minds, at once suspicious and credulous, weakly gregarious, easily baffled, and easily misled into the monstrous responsibilities of this present world. Mere cannon fodder and stuff for massacres and stampedes.

"We are living in a world . . . which has seen the Zeppelin, the radio, the bombing airplane, come along since 1900, and our schools are drooling along very much as they were drooling along 37 years ago."

Wells, assailing modern teachers as well, warned of the need for "more and better teachers."

"Two-thirds of the teaching profession now is in urgent need of being either reconditioned or superannuated," he said.

"I believe that the crazy combative patriotism that plainly threatens to destroy civilization today is very largely begotten by the schoolmaster and the schoolmistress in their history lessons. They take the growing mind at a naturally barbaric phase and they inflame and fix its barbarism.

"I think we underrate the formative effect of this perpetual reiteration of how we won, how our empire grew and how relatively splendid we have been in every department of life.

"We are blinded by habit and custom to the way it infects these growing minds with the chronic and nearly incurable disease of national egotism."

Borah Predicts Senate Damper On Third Term

Would Vote Disapproval if Necessary, He Believes; Holt to Act.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, predicted guardedly yesterday the Senate will go on record against a Presidential third term—provided the issue reaches a vote.

The Senate's dean expressed his views after hearing Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, would submit the same anti-third-term resolution which the Senate approved nine years ago and the House adopted in 1875.

Borah voted for it in 1928, when Calvin Coolidge was in the White House, and said "I have not changed my mind."

However, he joined Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, in voicing skepticism President Roosevelt desired renomination in 1940, adding "I doubt the third term will be a vital issue."

Some legislators remaining on Capitol Hill said privately they believe Congress will fight shy of the issue next session.

A freshman Democrat, Senator Lee, of Oklahoma, said today he doubted a resolution to put the Senate on record next session would reached a vote.

Holt, frequent Administration critic, noted nearly a score of Democrats now in the Senate voted in 1928 that a third term would be "unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions." They included Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, now majority leader.

In 1875, when President Grant was serving his second term, the House adopted the same resolution, 234 to 18.

Lincoln Memorial Pool Bass Put There by Ex-Rep. McClintic

Only One Remains of 4 Liberated by Oklahoman Last January and Johnny Bender Hopes to Land Him Today.

The fountain fish mystery, or whence came the 4-pound bass that Charles Stebbins caught in the Lincoln Memorial Pool? was solved yesterday.

The buxom bass that young Stebbins hooked Wednesday in the small pool just off Seventeenth street was one of four former Representative J. V. McClintic liberated there last winter.

"My, my, what a thrill it gave me this morning to read about that lad catching the 4-pounder," the former Congressman from Oklahoma said yesterday. "Yes, I put the bass in there. And three others besides. They weighed only about 2 pounds apiece then. That was last January."

McClintic, now Oklahoma's "ambassador" to Washington as representative of Gov. Maryland, went down to the pool early yesterday immediately after reading in The Post of young Stebbins' triumph. The 14-year-old angler lives at 707 Twenty-second street northwest.

The bass donor said he caught the four specimens in the Tidal Basin last January, and, with Fred Orsinger, director of the Commerce Aquarium, conceived the idea of freeing them in the little east reflecting pool. Only one was left when he visited the tank yesterday. He doesn't know what happened to the other two.

When the former Congressmen visited his fish farm yesterday morning workmen were preparing to drain and clean the tank. He asked Foreman William Easton wouldn't he please, when the crew got the pool emptied, pick up the sole remaining bass and transfer him to the big pool adjoining. Easton said, "Sure."

The promise reassured McClintic, but when 14-year-old John Bender came down a little while later he was mighty worried by the sight of men with rakes and brushes drawing the moss and debris from the fringe of the pool.

John, an associate of Charles Stebbins in the Foggy Bottom Rod and Reel Club, and who witnessed Wednesday's epochal catch, energetically cast and reeled most of yesterday in a desperate attempt to hook Benny the Bass before the tank is emptied.

Japan Must Crush Chiang's 'Anti-Japanism,' Hirota Says

Vote Support as Premier Issues Veiled Warning to Neutral Powers.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Sept. 2.—Japan's main objective in her undeclared war with China, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told foreign newspapermen today, is elimination of "the anti-Japanese elements" that dominate the present Chinese government and "establishment of co-operation between China and Japan."

He named Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, premier and head of the Chinese armies, as "the spearhead of the anti-Japan movement" in China and indicated Japan wanted to destroy his Nanking regime.

Hirota's call for destruction of the Nanking government was echoed by the major political parties, Minseito and Seiyukai, which in a national mass meeting adopted a resolution declaring Gen. Chiang's regime must be overthrown and "China must be chastized."

The parties, on the eve of the emergency session of Parliament which will meet tomorrow to vote more funds for the war in China, also voted unanimous support for the rigid wartime policies.

In his two-hour talk with foreign correspondents, Hirota said concerning the Japanese navy's blockade of Chinese coasts that "vessels with peaceful intentions will not be stopped."

Regarding rights and interests of neutral powers in China, Hirota said, "I can assure you they will be fully respected by Japan." But he continued:

"In order that peace may be restored as soon as possible, the powers are invited to co-operate with Japan by refraining from any action likely to prolong the present hostilities."

He said the Japanese government still was awaiting the results of its investigation at Shanghai before replying to Britain's stiff protest, presented in Tokyo last Sunday, concerning the shooting of Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Huggessen, British Ambassador to China, by a Japanese airman.

In Shanghai the Japanese Embassy said it had completed its investigation of the shooting and forwarded the findings to Tokyo, but would not disclose what they were. The Ambassador, seriously wounded, is recovering in a Shanghai hospital.

Hirota declared the recently announced conclusion of a nonaggression pact between China and the Soviet Union was "of special significance" in view of what he called "collusion between the present leaders of China and Communists" in preparation for war against Japan.

Those leaders, the foreign minister declared, "have long fostered anti-Japanism as a tool for their political purposes" and have "openly and energetically prepared for war against Japan."

"Japan as a bulwark against the encroachments of communism cannot remain indifferent" to the Chinese-Soviet pact, he continued.

Hirota declared China had blocked Japanese efforts to localize early hostilities and "also moved vast armies northward challenging Japan directly." The trouble at Shanghai, he said, was caused when China "violated the agreement made in 1932 and rushed regular troops into the forbidden area" around Shanghai.

An imperial decree provided terms for the army's five academies shall be shortened by from 2 to 12 months in order to make cadets more quickly available for duty as officers. This has not been done since the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-5.

Two Marines Find Japan Frowns on Peiping Pictures

Peiping, Sept. 2 (AP).—Two United States Marines ran into trouble today when they sought to take pictures outside the embassy quarter as Japanese troops were marching through Peiping.

Private Weinberger, a recent arrival from Boston, figured in the first incident. Japanese took the film from his camera.

A few minutes later Otto Geissberger, of North Bergen, N. J., found himself surrounded by Japanese who tried to take him to the Japanese Embassy guard. He prevailed upon them to escort him to the United States Embassy, where the incident was cleared up.

The Marines were ordered not to photograph outside the embassy quarter henceforth.

Roosevelt Is Issue In N. Y. Campaign

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—The New York mayoralty campaign entered a more conclusive phase tonight.

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, choice of pro-New Deal Democratic leaders, said "the issue" as among the Democrats was one of fealty to President Roosevelt.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, candidate of Tammany's anti-New Deal Manhattan chieftains, brought up again the President's unsuccessful plan to change the Supreme Court.

was flashed to London while key members of the cabinet met in Downing street to decide on action as the result of the attack on the Havock.

Secret Action by France.

The cabinet ordered naval reinforcements dispatched to the Mediterranean immeditaely to protect shipping along the empire's "life line," and hurried consultations were held with the French government.

From Paris came word that France, too, is taking secret naval measures—probably naval escorts for all merchant shipping—in close collaboration with Britain.

The orders to the British and French fleets—together more powerful than the combined naval strength of other European powers—were "shoot to sink."

The tension and widespread fears of war in the Mediterranean were aggravated by reliable reports the Havock and the destroyer Hasty, which rushed up the Valencia coast to her rescue, might have sunk the "pirate" submarine with depth charges.

The British press alleged openly today the submarine was Italian.

Members of the crew of the Havock, which arrived at Gibraltar, said the ship dropped seven depth bombs and the Hasty dropped nine, and "a few minutes later the sea was covered with oil."

Markings Absent.

The captain of the steamer Woodford, Gregorious Mimirto, said the submarine which sank his ship was painted gray, but there were no other distinguishing markings.

The Fascist newspaper La Tribuna insinuated a Russian submarine aiding the loyalists attacked the Havock and the Woodford.

British naval authorities pointed out that both attacks occurred along a strip of loyalist coast that has been under heavy naval blockade by the insurgents, of whom Italy boasts of aiding.

The insurgents, they said, have only one submarine, while attacks on neutral shipping have occurred from one end of the Mediterranean to the other.

Britain has 11 warships cruising about the spot where the Havock was attacked.

It also was announced Britain has accepted a French proposal for a meeting of all Mediterranean powers in Geneva next week to decide upon a plan of "massed action" to protect shipping.

the shells fell in the Wangpoo between the American and Japanese flagships. Widespread fires blazed on land points struck by the bursting missles.

Marines in Danger.

Late Thursday Japanese bombers continued to operate close to the American Marines and British infantry defense lines in Shanghai's International Settlement, seriously imperiling the forces on guard there.

The Japanese command notified British authorities such raids would continue and advised withdrawal of outposts along the British line, which is a continuation of the American. The British gave no reply. St. John's University, largely supported by American mission funds, is in the endangered area.

The main battle for Shanghai continued fiercely along the curving 20-mile front between Woosung and Liuho, 12 to 20 miles north and northwest of Shanghai, with heavy expenditure of men and munitions, but no decisive military change.

Within the foreign areas of Shanghai one peril to foreign lives was lessened when authorities of the French concession announced the outbreak of cholera there had been brought under control. No foreigners had contracted the disease.

Shrapnel on U. S. Lines.

In a sunset raid Thursday the Japanese bombing squadrons caused havoc to Chinese life and property in areas just outside the marines' lines, on which shrapnel fell thickly. There were no American casualties. The Japanese apparently were aiming at the Chinese mint and other government buildings nearby.

Daily air raids along their front, coupled with heavy fire from Japanese warships at Chinese positions, has made the United States marines' sector so dangerous the men wear steel helmets and keep close behind their heavy sandbag barricades.

The Japanese, admitting their previous claims of the capture of Paoshan were premature, announced their troops were approaching that walled town, northwest of Woosung, at the confluence of the Yangtze and the Whangpoo. The advance was denied by Chinese officials.

Liuho Heavily Shelled.

Liuho, at the western end of the Yangtze battleground, also was the scene of desperate fighting. Japanese warships and air squadrons bombarded the town. But apparently without compelling Chinese troops to fall back.

Twenty-eight Japanese troopships were observed offshore at Woosung and Liuho. American authorities estimated Japan is attempting to land a total of 42,000 men along this shore, to bring its total land strength around Shanghai to 75,000 men, pitted against 200,000 Chinese.

Chinese officials asserted their stubborn defense along the Yangtze had prevented the Japanese at Liuho from effecting a junction with those at Woosung. The latter town, almost leveled in the 1932 Chinese-Japanese conflict, once more was a scene of desolation.

"Peace Commission."

Japanese dispatches from the northern battle zone asserted all the Peiping-Kalgan Railway had come under domination of the Japanese columns operating along that highway to inner Asia.

In Kalgan, gateway to the northwest and capital of Chahar Province, a Japanese-fostered "peace maintenance commission" had been established. This was similar to commissions already set up in Peiping and Titentsin, and foreign observers believed all soon would be merged into an autonomous, Japanese-dominated administration for all of conquered North China.

Although cholera in Shanghai was under control, infected persons were isolated and inoculation trucks moved through the city injecting thousands with serum.

German, Czech Wounded.

But with hundreds of Chinese bodies still unburied in northern Shanghai, danger continued. Japanese in control of that section were burning scores of bodies.

A German and a Czech who ventured between the Chinese and Japanese lines in the Kiangwan district north of Shanghai were wounded by Chinese troops, who apparently mistook them for Japanese. They had gone into the war zone to inspect property belonging to their firms. Japanese marines rescued them and took them to a hospital. They were expected to recover.

Cable Lines to U. S. Cut.

"The cable communication between China and the Western world has been entirely disrupted as the cable lines of the Great Northern Co., the Eastern Co. and the Commercial Pacific Co. have been cut by the Japanese navy. This wanton act of destruction has not only inconvenienced thousands of foreign nationals in China, but has also constituted a direct attack on the vested interests of third parties."

Japanese on Defensive.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 3.—Overwhelmed by the greater Chinese forces, the Japanese today appeared to be on the defensive in every sector of the Shanghai front.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Nanking dictator, was reported personally in charge of the strategy for the offensive and had thrown his Central government divisions back into the combat.

Developments of the last 24 hours included:

1. In Tokyo Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told foreign correspondents Japan is prepared to bomb the British-owned Kowloon-Canton Railway, connecting Britain's rich Hongkong crown colony and the South China city of Canton, if it is used for military purposes.

2. A group of 150 Americans, mostly missionary families, stubbornly refused to abandon cottages in the summer resort of Mokanshan.

3. Rear Admiral Harry Yarnell, commanding the United States Asiatic squadron, announced American vessels in the Shanghai area will be escorted by at least one United States warship.

4. Rear Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, Japanese naval commander, warned all foreign warships and merchantmen to remain outside the zone of hostilities unless their movement inside the zone is "absolutely imperative."

Sneedville, Tenn., Sept. 2 (AP).—Charlie Johns, 23, denied today that he and his 9-year-old bride have parted and said: "Sooner or later we're going to build our own home, move into it and set up housekeeping."

Bermuda Dealers Dump Liquor to Avoid Levy

Hamilton, Bermuda, Sept. 2 (U.P.). An alcoholic version of the Boston Tea Party resulted today in 1,000 cases of liquor being dumped into St. George's Harbor by liquor dealers to escape high bonding charges.

States Will Get $2,760,000 for Wild-Life Work

President Signs Conservation Bill; $150,000 Is Maximum Grant.

By the Associated Press.

The wildlife restoration act signed yesterday by President Roosevelt authorizes annual distribution of $2,760,000 to States that agree to cooperate.

Each State is required to adopt assenting legislation, but any Governor, until after adjournment of the next regular legislative session, may give his State's assent.

The measure does not levy new taxes, but provides for distribution of existing taxes on sportsmen's equipment to the States on the basis of area and number of hunting licenses.

No State may receive more than $150,000 a year, and a minimum of $15,000 is provided for any State that will set aside $5,000 for the work. The States are to set aside, with these maximum and minimum exceptions, one-third as much in State funds as they receive from the Government.

Estimated Federal contributions to States, figured on the basis of $3,000,000 taxes with an 8 per cent deduction for administration, were:

Alabama, $41,393; Arkansas, $32,880; Connecticut, $8,450; Delaware, $3,808; Florida, $36,580; Georgia, $43,211; Kentucky, $37,157; Louisiana, $32,179; Maine, $37,965.

Maryland, $19,377; Massachusetts, $19,483; Mississippi, $38,513; New Hampshire, $16,325; New Jersey, $30,627; New York, $151,524; North Carolina, $48,938; Pennsylvania, $161,439; Rhode Island, $2,393; South Carolina, $31,481; Tennessee, $32,883; Vermont, $15,136; Virginia, $51,727.

Six Peace Units Reiterate Plea For Neutrality

Ask Hull to Invoke Law in China, Stamping Conflict 'War.'

By the Associated Press.

Six peace organizations renewed their demand last night that the neutrality act be applied immediately to the Sino-Japanese conflict.

To do so, they said, in a joint telegram to President Roosevelt, would "effectively deny the statement by Secretary Roper implying that fear of interference with our trade is a major reason for delaying the application of the law."

The State Department made no comment.

The six peace societies—World Peaceways, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the National Council for the Prevention of War, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the Emergency Peace Campaign and the Committee on Militarism in Education—asked the steamship Wichita and any other American vessels carrying war cargoes to China be stopped.

"We earnestly believe the United States cannot afford to permit such a conflict as is going on in the Far East to proceed without stamping it as war," they said.

Peculiar Revolver Leads Police to Suspect Murder.

Indications of suicide in the shooting of August Poppenberg, 31, near Berwyn, Md., yesterday, were strengthened by study of a gun found in the Washington real estate man's hand.

The gun was first thought by police to be of .38-caliber. The death bullet was a .32.

This circumstance led police to suspect a crime, but study of the gun last night showed it was a .32 on a .38 frame.

Despite the explanation, James Redding, 310 Hamilton avenue northwest, brother-in-law of Poppenberg, demanded an autopsy. Police also were trying to determine where Poppenberg got the unusual weapon.

Body in Stolen Truck.

The body was found at the wheel of a stolen Army Engineers' truck, in woods 30 miles from Great Falls, from where the truck was taken.

Poppenberg was in a depressed mood lately, according to his landlady, Mrs. Margaret Waltz. She said he had attempted suicide last winter by locking himself in the garage with the motor of his car running.

Events leading up to the death were unusual. Poppenberg stalked out of his rooming house at 4915 Kansas avenue northwest at 2 a. m., a few minutes after a party in the lower half of the house had broken up, it was said. He had not attended.

He next appeared at the Great Falls Hotel, reporting his car had fallen into the canal. He spoke to the proprietor and others there, saying he was from New York and did not know his way. He said he had failed to see a turn in the road and had driven into the canal.

He then disappeared from the hotel, apparently in a daze.

A box of .32 cartridges was found in Poppenberg's pocket when the body was examined.

Poppenberg's body was found by David Sampson, 16, of Berwyn, who some months ago discovered the skeleton of Charles A. Miller, Washington taxi driver. The body was less than 100 yards from where the skeleton was found.

Police Say Patient Drove Wrecked Car

Takoma Park police believed last night Willard Bennett, 20, of 106 Lincoln avenue, Takoma Park, grocery clerk, brought to Washington Sanitarium in a dazed condition, was the driver of a car found wrecked between Hyattsville and Takoma Park.

Bennett was brought to the sanitarium early yesterday suffering with cuts about the head, brain concussion and body bruises. He knew his name, but was unable to tell how he suffered his injuries.

Boy Dies in River Where His Father Drowned in 1935

Yesterday, two years after his father drowned in the Anacostia River, Alan Buckingham, 11, of 420 Jefferson avenue, Riverdale, Md., stepped in water over his head in the Northeastern Branch of the river, and drowned before playmates could rescue him.

The boy had been playing near the branch when he slipped and fell in the shallow water. Deciding to wade, the boy stepped into a 12-foot hole.

Robert Love, 11, one of Buckingham's friends, caught him by his hair, but the youth slipped away and disappeared.

The Bladensburg Rescue Squad vainly applied artificial respiration for more than an hour. Father J. E. Malloy administered last rites after the body was recovered.

2 Indians Named To Executive Jobs In Indian Service

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes promoted two Indians yesterday to important executive positions in the Indian Service.

He named Marc L. Burns, a Chippewa, as co-ordinator for Indian Service in the Great Lakes region.

Driver Held After Bus Kills FCC Attorney, Wife, Son and Friend, All of D. C.

Heavy Vehicle Smashes Auto Near Baltimore

Swung Out to Pass Truck and Hit Car Head-on, Officer Says.

Four persons—a prominent Federal Communications Commission attorney, his wife, a son they were taking to Dartmouth College, and the youth's roommate—were killed yesterday in a head-on collision between their automobile and a bus on the Philadelphia road near Baltimore.

The dead are Mr. and Mrs. Elmer D. Hays, of 17 Oxford street, Chevy Chase, Md.; their 18-year-old son, Elmer, jr., and the boy's roommate at college, James R. Leech, jr., 3506 Macomb street.

The party left yesterday for Hanover, N. H., where the two boys planned to enter their sophomore year.

Hays, a native of Winchester, Ky., was assistant general counsel in charge of telephones with the Federal Communications Commission. A graduate of the University of Kentucky, he was appointed chief attorney of license enforcement and revocation secretary for the AAA in 1933. In July, 1936, he joined the FCC.

Parents Out of City.

Leech was the son of J. Russell Leech, a member of the Board of Tax Appeals. His parents were in Johnstown, Pa., at the time of the accident.

Both of the youths were graduated from Western High School in 1936. Hays was a member of Phi Beta Rho Fraternity, first lieutenant of the cadets in his fourth year and a member of the Officers' Club. Leech was editor of the Year Book, captain of the cadets in his fourth year and a member of the Officers' Club.

According to State Police Sergt. E. S. Haddway, the bus was operated by Marcus Dixon, of Oxford, Pa. The bus was southbound.

Dixon was held in $2,500 bail. A date for an inquest was not set.

Bus Passenger Hurt.

An Associated Press dispatch states that Haddway quoted witnesses as saying a southbound truck in front of the bus stopped unexpectedly. Haddway said Dixon swung the bus into the road to avoid the truck and the collision with the Hays' car followed.

Elizabeth Hays, 20, a daughter, is the sole survivor of the family. She is a senior at Hollins College. She did not make the trip.

Two Classmates at Scene.

It was learned last night that two other Dartmouth students reached the crash scene shortly after the accident. They identified two of the victims as members of their class at the Hanover institution and notified neighbors of the families.

Bodies of all victims were at Hysong's undertaking establishment last night. Plans for funeral services still were incomplete, although it was said that the Leech boy would be buried at Johnstown, Pa. His parents arrived from that city shortly before midnight.

Plans for burial of members of the Hays family awaited the arrival in Washington of the elder Hays brothers, J. Smith Hays, of Winchester, Ky., and Robert Hays, of Lexington, Ky.

U. S. Deficit in 2 Months Reaches $352,144,000

The Treasury closed its books yesterday on the first two months of this fiscal year, recording a $352,144,000 deficit, $3,000,000 more than for the corresponding period last year.

In July the deficit ran far ahead of the same month a year ago. For August, spending topped revenues by $102,760,000.

Maryland Child Run Down While Brother Watches; Driver Released.

Eight-year-old Leslie Taylor, of 35 Chapel road, Seat Pleasant, Md., was dead on arrival at Casualty Hospital yesterday after he was struck by an automobile on River road near the District line.

Meanwhile, District traffic accidents sent six persons to hospitals, one seriously hurt.

According to Ninth Precinct police, the Taylor boy was struck by a machine operated by Aloysius P. Geary, of Capitol Heights, who was taken into custody after bringing the child to the hospital.

Geary told police the child ran across the roadway from behind an embankment. Four playmates, including his brother, James, 11, witnessed the tragedy. The youngsters had been swimming.

Washington police turned Geary over to Prince Georges County authorities, who released him on personal bond pending inquest.

William Marns, 74, of 914 Sixth street southeast, was in serious condition at Emergency Hospital last night after having been struck by a car said by police to have been operated by James Davenport, colored, 47, of 1331 First street southeast. The accident occurred at Seventh and I streets southwest.

Marns was treated for a fractured leg and a possible fracture of the skull. Davenport was held on a charge of reckless driving.

Mattie Dreger, 42, of 3000 Connecticut avenue northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises after she was knocked down by an automobile at Fourteenth and H streets northwest.

Mrs. Dreger was struck, police said, by a car driven by Frank Bargas, 30, of 309 Eleventh street southeast, who was backing his car.

Mrs. Sarah Tenn, 40, of 3038 Georgia avenue northwest, suffered cuts and shock in a collision in the 1800 block of New York avenue northwest. She was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Elmer D. Hays (inset), prominent Government attorney; his son, Elmer, jr. (lower right); the son's college roommate, James R. Leech (lower left), and Mrs. Hays were fatally injured early yesterday when their automobile figured in a head-on collision with a bus on the Philadelphia road just north of Baltimore. Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 2.—Local police continued a search for a field of marihuana which James Webb, 28, colored, of Hagerstown, told them was the source of his supply after he had been arrested at Martinsburg for its sale. U. S. Continent Gains Most in Sugar Quotas

Offshore Growers Allowed Small Increase as New Law Is Effective.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace put the new sugar control law into effect yesterday, increasing his estimate of sugar consumption in the United States this year and authorizing continental cane growers to supply the bulk of that increase.

The new law, signed by President Roosevelt last night despite his opposition to some of its provisions, sets up a new formula for apportioning the American sugar market among domestic, insular and other areas.

Wallace boosted the estimate of 1937 consumption 360,000 tons and then apportioned the increase as follows:

Continental cane growers (Florida and Louisiana), 172,129 tons; continental beet growers (Colorado, California and othr Western States); 19,785; Cuba, 92,115; Philippine Islands, 49,562; Hawaii, 11,866; Puerto Rico, 9,446; Virgin Islands, 3,934; foreign countries other than Cuba, 1,000.

The year's total quota for continental cane areas became 442,793 tons, and that for continental beet regions, 1,633,361.

AAA officials said the new law authorizes benefit payments to growers on sugar marketed after July 1 this year.

Only growers who comply with the child labor ban and other labor standards fixed in the act will be eligible.

Authorities predicted the benefits will total $20,000,000 less than the Government's revenue from a processing tax on sugar manufacturing, which became effective today.

When President Roosevelt signed the legislation last night, he charged it legalizes a "virtual monopoly" of a small group of seaboard refiners and declared he approved the measure only upon assurance from Congressional leaders that growers were ending an "unholy alliance" with the refiners.

Answers "Reprisal" Fears.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 2 (AP).—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, described President Roosevelt's signing of the sugar bill today as the "best answer" to reports of attempts to punish Senators for their opposition to the President's court bill.

War of Unions Stops Shipping On West Coast

C. I. O. and A. F. L. Fight; Four Crews Strike in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—Cargoes piled up on the docks here tonight and fear of a general shipping paralysis grew as a C. I. O.-A. F. L. maritime labor controversy took more men off their jobs.

Another trouble spot developed in the national maritime picture when crews of four vessels struck at Baltimore, Md., over wages and conditions. The crews were members of the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate.

Waterfront authorities here began marshaling all available cargo space to hold goods in shipment pending settlement of the dispute which has led A. F. L. teamsters to stop trucking to and from the docks in an effort to force a showdown with the C. I. O. over the status of 75 allegedly "locked out" warehousemen, allies of the John L. Lewis organization.

The C. I. O.-affiliated warehousemen's union filed charges of discrimination and unfair labor practices against the California Packing Corporation, former employer of the 75 workers.

The trouble began when warehousemen leaders sought to organize the plant's workers last fall. C. I. O. leaders charged the company dealt with another union group. The result was the alleged lockout of the 75 C. I. O. workers.

The teamsters decreed a tie-up of port trucking yesterday.

At Atlantic City the American Federation of Labor's executive council asked all loyal unions today to help the truck drivers in their fight against the C. I. O. longshoremen in San Francisco.

Salt Lake City, Sept. 1 (AP).—Searchers held slight hope tonight of finding alive Private Henry V. Pearson, who was last seen clinging to an Army plane when it plunged into Great Salt Lake.

His companion, Lieut. Lucian N. Powell, pilot, swam to shore. The plane was empty when reached.

Grapeland, Tex., Sept. 1 (AP).—More than 100 Army airplanes criss-crossed east and central Texas today hunting Cadet Guy W. Edgerton, of Kenly, N. C., who was lost Monday night.

Lima, Peru, Sept. 1 (AP).—Four seaching planes unsuccessfully combed the jungle region along the Peru-Colombian frontier today seeking a Peruvian army amphibian missing with six aboard.

CCC to Discharge 75,000 Enrollees

Officials of the Civilian Conservation Corps said last night that approximately 75,000 enrollees will be discharged during September to comply with an act of Congress extending the CCC for three years.

The act, they said, fixed the maximum age limit for enrollees at 24 years and limited the time of service to two years. Those to be dismissed either have passed the age limit or served more than two years.

A CCC employment week campaign is scheduled to begin on Labor Day.

Latest Break in Series Blamed on New England Governor Occurs as Grapevines Hail Man's Release to Live in Massachusetts.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 2.—Seven more convicts escaped from a Georgia chain gang today as prison inmates whispered of "Massachusetts parole" as a new key to freedom.

As grapevines sped the word Gov. E. D. Rivers had released a colored lottery operator on condition he live nine months in the Bay State, the newest break occurred in a series Gov. Rivers has blamed on Massachusetts' Gov. Hurley's refusal to extradite a Georgia fugitive.

Seven convicts escaped from the Banks County chain gang, near Homer, Ga., and carried two guards away. The guards later were released unharmed.

Six other Georgia prisoners amended clemency applications with certification of willingness to live in Massachusetts.

Residents will be selected from families whose incomes range from $1,000 to $2,000 a year. Consideration, too, will be given to families with three children and incomes as high as $2,100 per year. "Up to $2,200 will be considered" for families with four children.

No family with more than four children will be accepted.

Families who desire homes in the area are urged to register immediately. More than 9,000 applicants already have been received.

A limited number of garages will be available at $1 a month for open ones and $2 with locks.

A limited amount of furniture designed to harmonize with the dwellings will be available.

In a breakdown of costs the Administration said the amount which will be paid out for labor is $9,102,000, which represents 69.95 per cent of costs, except land.

In estimating the total cost at $14,227,000, the Administration declared that $4,902,000 "has been expended on account of the relief and rehabilitation aspects of the program over and above the costs which normally would be incurred for labor."

This figure represents the cost of giving relief to those residing in the Washington-Baltimore region who were employed on the project in a time of acute emergency.

Approximately $284,000 will be returned to the Government by sale of equipment and surplus material.

More than 9,700 men have been given employment during the 23 months the project has been under construction.

Press Urged to Aid Self-Government

Williamstown, Mass., Sept. 2 (AP).—Henry R. Luce, publisher of Fortune, Time and Life magazines, tonight said the American press, to survive, must "assist the people to govern themselves" and must perfect its craftsmanship. Luce addressed the Institute of Human Relations, meeting at Williams College under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

Asserting "the present crisis in world affairs may be described as a crisis in journalism," Luce called modern dictatorships "unspeakable" because "they suppress the truth."

James H. Dyer and Verna S. Chesney.

James H. Dyer, 80, who has practiced law in Illinois for more than half a century, last night undertook a new practice—the rehearsal for his marriage tomorrow night to Mrs. Verna S. Chesney, 59-year-old former Government translator.

A senior member in the law firm of Dyer & Dyer, of Hoopeston, Ill., Mr. Dyer was formerly mayor of Hoopeston and is active in business and civic affairs of the community.

At the rehearsal last night in the ballroom of the All States Hotel, where Mrs. Chesney makes her home, the conventional episode of kissing the bride was not made a part of the ceremonies.

Farley as President Is Wallace 'Choice'

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, jesting with reporters yesterday, came out for James A. Farley for President in 1940.

The farm chief, who has himself frequently been mentioned as a possible nominee of the Democratic Party, was asked about recent reports that the Administration might support Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, in 1940.

Several more pointed questions brought this:

Roosevelt Signs Slum Bill, Goes On Fishing Trip

$526,000,000 Wagner Act and Helium Monopoly Become Laws.

By the Associated Press.

Poughkeepsie, Sept. 2.—President Roosevelt disposed of all remaining Congressional business today and embarked from here at 3:25 p. m. on the yacht Potomac for five days of fishing in eastern New York waters.

His course tonight lay down the cliff-bordered Hudson, around Manhattan and into the East River and Long Island Sound.

Tomorrow he may watch the six-meter sailing races off Oyster Bay.

Before leaving, the President announced:

(1) Approval of the $526,000,000 Wagner-Steagall bill authorizing loans and grants to local housing corporations to clear slums and build low-rent housing units for low income groups.

(2) Signing of the Senate bill authorizing a Government monopoly in helium production and revising regulations to permit export of this non-inflammable gas to foreign countries for commercial or medical use and under strict stipulations none would be used for military purposes.

(3) Approval of the bill authorizing Federal aid to States for wild life resoration projects, the money to come from a fund equal to taxes collected on firearms and ammunition.

(4) Veto of the District of Columbia airport improvement bill.

The housing bill sets up a housing authority in the Department of the Interior with an initial capital of $1,000,000 and power to issue $500,000,000 of Government-guaranteed bonds to raise funds for loans. An additional $25,000,000 appropriation is authorized, but this will not be needed until actual construction of housing units is under way.

Hopkins in Party.

In the President's party tonight were Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator; his son, James; Capt. Paul Bastedo, naval aide, and Capt. Ross T. McIntire, naval physician to the President.

Crews in white manned the rails of the Potomac and the new destroyer Selfridge, escort ship, as the Chief Executive was piped over the side at the Poughkeepsie dock.

Mrs. Roosevelt saw him off. Crowds lined the shore. The President hopes to return sometime Tuesday.

A resume of Congressional action announced by James Roosevelt showed 937 bills passed, of which 40 were vetoed, 17 while Congress was in session and 23 after adjournment.

Two bills were passed over his veto. One renewed for another five years veterans' five-year premium term insurance policies. The other was the Federal Land Bank interest measure.

James Roosevelt took over the press liaison assignment temporarily today. It was his first taste of dealing with the newspapermen for his father since he became a full-fledged secretary July 1 at an annual salary of $10,000. He substituted for Marvin McIntyre, who is on vacation.

Housing Loans Asked.

By the Associated Press.

Officials of the Public Works Administration's housing division said yesterday many municipalities have applied already for Federal aid to low-cost housing and slum-clearance projects under the new Wagner-Steagall program.

The Wagner-Steagall bill, signed yesterday by President Roosevelt, provides Federal loans and grants for projects intended to provide dwellings for low-income families.

Officials expressed a belief the PWA housing division would form the nucleus of the new United States Housing Authority, set up by the Wagner-Steagall act to handle $526,000,000 financing of new dwellings in the next three years.

Whether four housing projects erected by the Resettlement Administration, which was disbanded Wednesday, will be transferred to the new authority was still undetermined.

Officials said, however, the authority probably would take over projects erected by PWA.

Mrs. Thaw was born in Switzerland, daughter of Harry Hayes Morgan, former United States consul general there.

Man Confesses Slaying Boy, 5, In Sex Crime

Cambridge Suspect Tells of Killing and Other Attacks.

By the United Press.

Boston, Sept. 2.—Police Capt. James F. Daley late today announced a Cambridge man had confessed to the sex-murder last October of 5-year-old Chester Harris, curley-haired Cambridge twin.

The man, Joseph Primintal, 24, was arrested yesterady on a charge of molesting two little girls in Boston. The confession followed today.

The Harris child's skeleton was found January 27 in a shallow grave in a hobo jungle within sight of his home.

Primintal said he met Chester near the Harris home October 30. He took the boy by the hand and walked with him into Brighton, a suburb, when Daley said Primintal confessed, he attacked the child.

"Afterward I felt his pulse and there wasn't any," Daley quoted the suspect. "I think he was dead. I buried him right away.

"Next day I uncovered the grave, wrapped him up in a burlap bag and buried him again."

Primintal also confessed to the abuse of several children in Cambridge and Boston, according to Daley.

Prank of 2 Boys Nearly Wrecks Capital Limited

Two small colored boys, "for the fun of it," endangered the lives of scores of passengers on the Capital Limited yesterday morning when they placed two steel plates on the B. & O. tracks near Linden, Md.

The youngsters, 10 and 13, were playing near the tracks when they found the steel objects and decided to place them on the tracks to see what would happen. Track Foreman Crawford saw the plates and removed them a few minutes before the limited thundered by.

Railroad detectives and Montgomery County officers, after nine hours of investigation, said they got the boys to admit they were the culprits. The boys were turned over to the Montgomery County Welfare Board in Rockville.

Fallen Wire Kills Farmer, Wife Dies In Rescue Effort

Beckley, W. Va., Sept. 2 (AP).—Clifford Statzer's radio stopped working today. He went out to find a high tension wire had fallen across an electric line, cutting off his electricity.

The farmer picked up an iron-handled pole and tried to remove the wire with it. His wife, standing nearby with their baby in her arms, screamed:

"Don't touch that wire. It will kill you."

Statzer fell to the ground. Mrs. Statzer put the baby down and seized her husband, trying to pull him away. She, too, collapsed.

The current had passed through the pole into their bodies. Both were killed instantly.

"Economic Suicide."

It is probably mere coincidence that the report of the International Institute of Agriculture, denouncing governmental crop restriction, follows so closely on the inauguration of our new cotton-subsidy plan. But the coincidence lends added point to the Institute's scathing criticism of the policy of "restricting agricultural production with a view to adapting it to dwindling demand."

From its headquarters in Rome this independent organization, founded by American initiative over 30 years ago, issues periodic summaries of world agricultural trends. The United States, like every other important nation, is a member of the institute, the scientific detachment and repute of which give great importance to its formal announcements.

So it is worth a thought when the International Institute of Agriculture, in its current report, places the United States "under the Roosevelt Administration" second only to "the totalitarian states and Soviet Russia" in its devotion to governmental regimentation of agriculture and trade. This "methodical intervention of governments," the report continues, has in many cases changed the structure of agriculture "so profoundly that the effect is bound to be lasting."

As though to indorse the institute's findings comes our new cotton loan and subsidy policy, with all its implications for extension to other "basic crops" and consequent renewal of open restriction programs.

Such planned scarcity, the institute points out, is far more potent in retarding recovery than is Secretary Hull's trade agreements program in advancing it. The Hull program, the report asserts, "could not be said to have succeeded to a marked extent" because "the general trend of commercial policy continues to point to further restriction."

These are cutting criticisms, the more so because issued from so objective, restrained and authoritative a source. It is unpleasant to hear that as others see us we are ranked next to Germany, Italy and Russia as a country experimenting with "economic suicide." But at least we have the cold comfort of knowing that this sharp comment is an honest, as well as an expert, opinion.

Cultural Attaches.

The grave misgivings with which the British government views the Stuttgart conference of Germans living abroad will be widely shared in every democratic land. For the demands voiced by officials of the German government at this rally constitute a threat to the domestic peace, internal order and national well-being of other states.

What the Nazis appear to demand is that Germany should be permitted to colonize foreign lands with propagandists for Hitlerism and that these agents of Berlin be given diplomatic status to assist this work. It is not surprising that the British government has let it be known in very clear fashion that it regards such a point of view as intolerable. It is planning to turn down flatly and in unmistakable fashion the plan of Berlin to install three "cultural attaches" at the German Embassy in London.

Presumably it was because they used their journalistic status as a screen behind which to engage in espionage, propaganda and terrorism of German refugees, that three alleged newspaper correspondents of German nationality were recently expelled from Great Britain. Ostensibly in retaliation for this action, but perhaps more because they found his unvarnished correspondence embarrassing, the Nazi regime then expelled Norman Ebbutt, the highly regarded Berlin correspondent of the London Times.

Were it not such a serious matter, the world might overlook the views expounded at Stuttgart by officials of the Third Reich, and particularly their demand for extra-territorial status for Nazi agents, propagandists, organizers and spies. To be sure their program is essentially the same as that which the agents of other totalitarian governments, Communist as well as Fascist, have previously done or sought to do. But in the case of the Communists and the Italian Fascists such activities have largely been undertaken by stealth. The fact has been recognized that these activities were illegal, or in bad taste, or both.

The German regime, with a bombast which has only too often characterized the Reich's dealings with other peoples, now demands that such actions be legitimized and protected by nations whose institutions they tend to imperil. It is a subject on which our Department of State would do well to follow the British lead in speaking out.

Japan States Her Aim.

For the first time since Japan started her present aggression in China a responsible Japanese statesman has deigned to state its purpose, in phrases more convincing than the explanation that the Chinese are being butchered in order to make them "co-operative."

Foreign Minister Hirota, whose disagreeable job it is to rationalize the extraordinary actions of the uncontrolled militarists, now explains that war is being waged to oust Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, the premier of China and supreme commander of her armies. He characterizes Gen. Chiang as "the spearhead of the anti-Japan movement."

If a unified and modernized China is to be regarded as necessarily hostile to Japanese interests, then Mr. Hirota is right in declaring that Gen. Chiang is a large part of the issue. In the decade since he emerged from a welter of warring chieftains the present premier has amply demonstrated his capacity as one of the great leaders of our day.

Domestic peace has been steadily extended, education and communications have been developed, finances have been set in order, health and sanitation have been improved, business and agriculture have prospered over large parts of the country during Chiang's tenure of office. In no equal period for centuries has China made comparable progress. And all this has been done without countenancing Communist intrigue on the one hand, or without injuring foreign treaty rights and interests on the other.

As Gen. Chiang himself observed the other day, Japan was in a position to gain as no other nation could from this improvement. "Wise, statesmanlike and courteous treatment on her part," said the Chinese premier, "would undoubtedly have given her almost a monopoly of trade as well as the high respect of China's great population of 400,000,000."

Even the rape of Manchuria and adjacent provinces six years ago did not completely exhaust China's patience and forbearance toward Japan. At any time since 1931 the Tokyo government could have made a settlement, along the lines of the Lytton Report, which would have assured her both dominant economic advantage in Manchuria and permanent advantages in the entire Chinese market. But this was not the sort of "co-operation" the Japanese want.

Their aim, as Mr. Hirota now admits, is frankly punitive. Animated by that fear which springs from a sense of inferiority, the Japanese seek to destroy the Nanking government and to replace those now in control with venal puppets who can be relied upon to accept orders from Tokyo. Ten years ago, except that other powers then would not have tolerated it, the plan might have been achieved. Today it is going to prove very difficult. The China which Chiang has made is strong.

As Japan realizes this strength, as her troops struggle to gain a few square miles of the huge country they are invading, as the pinch of war is felt at home, as her bombs and shells unite China in a fury of righteous indignation, the course of Japanese policy is likely to become more and more desperate. Already Japan is injuring foreign interests, and opening herself to reprisals, in a way her leaders would not dare unless they were driven by fear.

This fear which actuates Japan—and will do so progressively as the Chinese hit back hard—is the key to the policy which other powers must follow as this undeclared war unfolds. There is no real mystery in Japanese policy, and no skill needed to see how it should be countered. The age-old policy of the bully succeeds just as long as others are scared by it; no longer.

In the desperate situation into which her militarists have maneuvered her, Japan will recognize no law and no restraint which she need not accept. And this is the more true because time is of the essence in her assault on the structure of world peace. A year of war, even six months, will see her flimsy economy shaken to its foundations, will see the threat of a Japanese collapse as sudden and startling as her rise as a world power.

The United States and other nations whose fundamental interests are menaced by Japan's aggression must estimate the weakness and fear-haunted bluster of Tokyo for what it is. Calmly and resolutely they must let Japan see that beyond a point she cannot expect to get away with an adventure which, as Gen. Chiang rightly says, is vital to all countries which believe in peace and the orderly regulation of international relations.

No bully was ever stopped by meek surrender. No long-range interest was ever served by acceptance of intolerable affronts. Every illegal action for which Japan successfully establishes a precedent today will only make like-minded dictators more prone to follow her example. That is why China, as Gen. Chiang says, is today fighting for much more than her own salvation.

Peace By Invective.

In an address before the convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, in Buffalo, Senator Bennett Clark displayed, in at least one particular, a notable ignorance of what he was talking about.

He is quoted as saying that defaulting nations attempting to negotiate small settlements with the United States are endeavoring "to get away from the wise provisions of the Johnson act, which prohibits the flotation of loans in this country by nations in default."

As it happens only one of these defaulting nations has resumed partial payments on its American debt. That nation is Hungary, whose recent action in this direction was rightly praised by Secretary Hull as a heartening sign that treaty observance still persists in the world. Senator Clark was therefore presumably referring to Hungary when he made this uncalled-for slur.

Had the Senator taken the slightest trouble to ascertain the facts he would have discovered that the partial payment to be made by Hungary does not in the slightest degree release that country from the prohibitions embodied in the Johnson act. And even if this were not the case no convincing evidence could be produced to show that a Hungarian loan flotation is contemplated.

The war debts constitute a convenient whipping boy for demagogues. If our debtors withhold payments they are denounced and if they offer to pay they are denounced again. All this, of course, in the name of peace and good will.

Senator Clark proposes that June 15 and December 15—the due dates for war debt payments—should be made national days of fasting and prayer; "keep out of war days." It is in order to suggest that not 2 but 365 days a year should be devoted to this subject.

Only by keeping everlastingly at it in the field of constructive, collective action for peace can this Nation be spared participation in the spreading calamity which bids fair to engulf the world. It will certainly not be spared by harboring the illusion, fostered by Senator Clark, that denunciation of friendly foreign nations and domestic "profiteers" alone provides any guarantee of peace.

Eyes On Greenbelt.

In the two years in which it was in existence the Resettlement Administration disbursed a sum estimated at $450,000,000.

It would be a gross exaggeration to say that this huge amount was entirely wasted. Part of it, certainly, must be written off on relief account. The tenant loans and the rehabilitation loans advanced by RA in part represent recoverable expenditures. The model communities built by RA, such as the one at Berwyn, with which Washingtonians are most familiar, have a tangible value as well as a potential social value that should not be minimized, however uneconomically they were constructed.

Indeed, the liquidation of RA does not mean the wholesale abandonment of its activities. Its tenant and rehabilitation loan activities will be continued and improved upon. Land utilization and retirement of submarginal lands have been taken over by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. But the most spectacular and most highly publicized activity of the RA, that of building a chain of Greenbelts across the Nation, has now been dropped.

With the cost of Greenbelt and its sister model communities written off, their actual social value is not to be underestimated. Greenbelt itself is to be the scene of a co-operative enterprise which the American people will watch with interest. A non-profit corporation, financed in the first instance by Edward A. Filene, the noted Boston merchant, is to be given the concession to run the stores, movies, garages, beauty parlors and other business establishments of the model town on a nonprofit basis.

This idealistic venture, designed to reduce the cost of living to the point where people in the low-income brackets can maintain a high standard of living, is frankly experimental. But at any rate no question of taxpayer subsidization will henceforth be mixed up in it. It will be up to the people of the community itself to make the venture go. If it succeeds, for the income class for whom it was intended, the Greenbelt plan, on a less extravagant basis, will come to life again.

Why We Behave.

Hervey Allen, Thomas Wolfe and Margaret Mitchell might as well give up. For when it comes to turning out reams of copy, Emily Post makes them look like pikers. Not only that, but she manages to beat her own record with each new book. The latest edition of "Etiquette" boasts 860 pages, whereas its predecessor consisted of a mere 723.

This doesn't necessarily mean that good manners have experienced any fundamental change. It still isn't proper for Mary to take John's arm except when approaching a puddle. Nor is it any less deplorable for Mr. Babbitt to use a toothpick after finishing the mess of chicken salad which Mrs. Babitt has so unimaginatively ordered. But new occupations, new modes of living, new kinds of transportation inevitably demand new rules. How to conduct oneself when traveling by air is one inevitable addition to the new type of etiquette. Though it's doubtful if the "air-sick," to whom her succinct suggestions are addressed, will be inclined to give much thought to Emily Post after the first air-pocket.

Roughly estimated, Mrs. Post's latest book has a gain of 16,000 words over her previous one. This feat in itself is enough to confound her fellow authors. But what will stagger the general public is how it's going to keep up with all these additional manners. At this rate, a man soon won't be able to tell from which side of the table his next meal is coming.

It's usually the person the world never heard of who thinks the world's against him.

Questionnaire.

At Columbia University, members of the Society for Psychological Study of Social Issues will foregather, it seems, to study a series of questions. While worthy of entire reproduction I refrain from copying them all for reasons of space. But I should like, apropos, to ask a few questions of my own, with here and there an answer.

1. Can enlightening answers be obtained from biased questions?
2. When is a political airing an academic issue?
3. What is an intellectual? Answer. An individual with an infinite capacity for assimilating other people's opinions and thinking they are his own.
4. What is propaganda? Answer. Corrosive publicity emanating from the other fellow.

A Challenge To Engineers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Lincoln Steffens, famous commentator on the American scene, once told his small son Peter that the human race was so all-fired smart that it had never been able to devise a kitchen or bathroom spigot that didn't run or drip after a short period of usage no matter how tightly it was turned off. I believe this observation was made during a discourse on present-day opportunities for youth in which Steffens stressed the fact that the human race hadn't really progressed very far: it only thought it had.

Now, to bear Steffens out, a few weeks ago we read of a resident of Silver Spring, Md., being electrocuted on handling an ordinary household lighting fixture while his skin was still damp or wet after emergence from his bath. And similar reports appear from time to time in the daily press. There seems never to be any question of fixing liability, either. At least there isn't in the case of the household electrocutions.

Why can't the marvelously efficient research engineers of our giant electrical corporations take a little time out from atom-splitting with tremendous voltages and devise a simple safety lighting fixture for bathrooms and cellars? We're willing to pay a little extra for it if it will conserve human life. The Silver Spring resident referred to above was the father of a family—his life must have been very important to them.

D. C. Lawlessness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The local wave of lawlessness, culminating yesterday in the holdup of a large restaurant at an early hour of the evening, shows forcibly that Washington is rated as an "easy city" by the underworld. Chicago used to be the most lawless city in the United States, but Mayor Kelly appears to have the situation under control. What is Congress going to do? Continue to pare the District budget to a point where adequate police protection is impossible of attainment?

Reading the graphic account of the lone bandit's getaway in The Post, a policeman doing traffic duty at Fourteenth and G streets blew his whistle to spread the alarm; another officer a block away did likewise, the first having left his post to give chase through the maze of traffic.

There is only one rational answer: more funds are urgently needed to place sufficient patrolmen on the metropolitan police force, which the Commissioners have already stressed to be undermanned. Undoubtedly this lack of adequate protection lies at the root of so many recent outrages by unsocial elements.

Can Southerners Take It?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't Southern gals take it, or does truth hurt?

Miss Barret's sketch, "Southern Lady," sure hit the nail on the head. They like it straight and otherwise. Don't take my word, just visit some of the cafes on paynight or later. "You all" will then be in high gear.

Most of the moonshine has always been made and consumed in the South, so they should be able to take it. I was there for some time, and have good eyes.

In Loyalist Spain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: H. V. Kaltenborn, announced as the dean of Columbia Broadcasting System's news commentators, has just announced over C. B. S. from Paris that Loyalist Spain is allowing the greatest freedom of the press that he has ever known in war times. He said further that the government was "bending over backwards" to carry out the democratic ideas of the government under the difficult stress or war. In his opinion, he said that the government was going so far in allowing freedom of movement to traitors and Fascist foreigners that they were in some instances endangering the successful prosecution of the war.

Mr. Kaltenborn is an experienced reporter, and his testimony deserves consideration in any effort to evaluate the struggle between the Spanish people and those Italian and German evangels of counter-democracy who today form the bulk of Franco's rebel army.

A Prediction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The session of Congress to meet in 1938 may develop an outstanding candidate for the Democratic Party nominee. I believe the candidate will come from east of the Mississippi River and west of the Delaware River and in this prediction I eliminate a third term for President Roosevelt, and the possibility of Postmaster General Farley, and this would also eliminate Vice President Garner.

Pennsylvania, since the War Between the States, has been the bulwark of the Republican Party, dominated in turn by Simon and Don Cameron, Matt Quay, Boises Penrose and the Vares in the eastern section of the State and the Mellons in the western section.

During this period the Democratic Party once selected a candidate for President credited to Pennsylvania, Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock. In 1940, Pennsylvania will have the second largest delegation in the Democratic National Convention, and if the Keystone delegation's Gov. George H. Earle will have a claim for consideration, former Gov. McNutt of Indiana will no doubt have his State delegation as well.

Senator Barkley may develop a leadership that will take him to the convention with a large following. In my opinion the youth of America will name the next President and a continuation of the New Deal policies.

Arlington County, Virginia, represents a cross-section of the Nation from 1916 to 1932. The county voted Republican on national issues in 1932; Roosevelt carried the county upward of 500 majority and in 1936 by nearly 2,000 majority and in a vote held in the Washington-Lee High School in 1936, 1,100 students participating, it is reported 800 voted for Roosevelt and 300 for Landon. This indicates to me the New Deal appealed to the youth of America.

Commemorative Stamps.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two noteworthy anniversaries in American history have occurred during recent history—the Centennial of the Declaration of Independence and the George Washington Bicentennial. A third is soon to be celebrated—the Constitution Sesquicentennial. The latter event has played the greatest role in the national development of the United States of America.

As a method of directing attention to the 20 months' celebration, and further to commemorate it, announcement was made by the Postmaster General that a three-cent stamp (central vignette, Stearn's, "Signing of the Constitution"), "chromatic purple" in color, will be placed on first-day sale September 17, 1937, at Philadelphia.

Yet during the past five years approximately a dozen three-cent commemorative stamps—the same size and color, the same overcrowding, poor perforations—have been released for State centennials. State expositions, State heroes.

While the Constitution Sesquicentennial rates but one common adhesive, the Washington Bicentennial was honored by a series of 12 stamps, which replaced all others for that period, and the Independence Centennial was commemorated by a regular stamp and an embossed envelope, both unique as compared to the other issues of the period.

Foreign governments, however, seem to have accorded our Constitution the fair recognition entitled it. In brief summary, Ecuador has authorized 14 stamps; Guatemala, tentatively four. No figures are as yet available for France, Honduras, and Venezuela, not mentioning the other Latin-American nations reported to be "considering the matter." Judging by past issues of these governments, the stamps will definitely be bi-colored, or of such workmanship that if the design of our stamp was appropriated, our release would be surpassed beyond recognition.

Whether our stamp will enjoy privileged sale during the celebration period has not been stated by postal authorities.

Conclusion reached: The Constitution Sesquicentennial special issue of this Nation will just be another three-cent purple commemorative, available only to, perhaps, interested stamp collectors. Even Sesquicentennial Chairman Sol Bloom is reported dissatisfied. It is easy to share his dissatisfaction.

Merited Praise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Sunday afternoon, August 29, my attention was attracted to an act of kindness by conductor No. 1260 to an elderly colored passenger on a Navy Yard car operating on New Jersey avenue.

When the car stopped at New Jersey avenue and P street this elderly woman, who was apparently a cripple, was kindly helped from the platform by the conductor, who exercised the utmost care to protect her from injury by passing automobiles. He used both hands to assist her in making a safe landing and called the attention of some careless drivers, about to pass at that moment, to this passenger. She was shown every possible courtesy.

A conductor of this type is worthy of the highest commendation. He is an asset to the company by whom he is employed. Such consideration for the safety of passengers (especially those unable to take care of themselves) is appreciated by thoughtful people.

Long live conductor No. 1260! May his tribe increase!

Three Days In Shanghai

TO me, the most amazing thing about the trouble in Shanghai was the dramatic suddenness with which it broke. As late as Thursday night, August 12, I went with a party of friends to a restaurant where we stayed for a long time listening to an orchestra of Hungarian gypsies. No one had the faintest idea of what was to happen in the next 48 hours.

On Sunday, the Chinese for the first time in history used bombing planes against a foreign enemy. We knew that their main objective would be the Idzumo, the Japanese flagship moored in the Whangpoo River right behind the Japanese consulate.

My son, Quentin, and I went down right after lunch to the Cathay Hotel. We stationed ourselves in a window on the eighth floor where we had a good view of the river at what seemed then a reasonable and safe distance from the flagship. When we got there, the river was quiet. It was a gray day. To the north lay the Idzumo, to the south a group of foreign warships, two British, one French, one American, and one Japanese, their flags, spots of flashing color.

The Bund, that great avenue along the water front, was as thronged with people as Coney Island beach on the Fourth of July. Refugees were pouring in from all sides laden with their pitifully meager belongings. Suddenly we heard cries gradually deepening to a deep, sullen roar, and an infuriated mob of a thousand people running like hounds were chasing five Japanese. Four managed to escape. One slipped and fell. As he lay in a widening lake of blood, they kicked him, beat him and stabbed him until his face was a bloody pulp. I was certain that he was dead, but when he was finally rescued by the police I saw him move his hand.

* * * *

Soon after this, signal lights on the Idzumo started winking, and the circling seaplanes came lower. I said to Quentin, "Watch, now, it is going to begin." Then the anti-aircraft guns on the Idzumo broke loose. One of the Japanese seaplanes slipped down and landed in the river, the other went north at top speed.

At that moment, the manager of the hotel came and asked us to leave for safety's sake. On the way out, I stopped and left a note with a telephone boy telling him where we were going in case friends wanted to find us. Twenty minutes later our friends stepped over the boy's body.

Quentin and I ran out of the hotel, jumped into the car and told the man to drive to Canton Road a few blocks farther down the Bund. By that time the whole world seemed full of shooting. We were held up by traffic in the narrow street between the cafe and the Palace Hotel. Eight minutes after we got away from there, two bombs fell precisely where we had been waiting and six more exploded on the Palace Hotel, demolishing entirely the three top stories.

When we got to Canton Road we ran into the building on the corner of the Bund and took the elevator to the eighth floor which was the top floor. Just as we got to a window facing the river two more bombs fell in the water 150 feet away. Two monstrous geysers of mud and water rose toward the sky, something pierced and broke the window. The water went up much higher than the building and sprayed our window as it came down.

I knew we ought not to be there, but I had never expected to see bombing at such close range and could not leave. Another bomb fell, this time across the river, exploding some stored oil-drums and causing a most spectacular fire. In the distance we could hear more bombing without being able to tell where it was.

* * * *

At last the air raid seemed over. The streets were no longer full of falling shrapnel from the anti-aircraft guns, and we felt that we should go back to the house where we were staying out in the French concession.

Our car could not be found. The chauffeur, much wiser than we, had gone home. We spent some time looking for him, and this unquestionably saved our lives again. On our usual way home we always passed through the great World Circle. This time, 20 minutes before we reached there, two bombs were dropped; later 37 truckloads of dead were removed. The scene was beyond description. There were hundreds of frightfully mangled bodies, stray arms and legs, and all the cars in the street were charred and covered with small holes. People in the cars had been disfigured beyond recognition. It was necessary to use watering trucks and hose to clean the streets.

On Sunday all seemed quiet. After lunch I was sitting in the garden with William P. Hunt, at whose house we were staying, when a shell exploded quite close. I really had had no idea how fast I could run until we ran into the house.

Fair Enough

Why Not Schmeling?

FOR THE THIRD time this year Max Schmeling is the victim of the run-around in his quest for the heavyweight championship which has so truly been called the fairest bauble in Fistiana's crown. Having knocked out Joe Louis, he was promised a fight with Jimmy Braddock, but it was postponed so that Braddock himself could fight the Negro boy. Braddock thought that if Schmeling could knock out Louis he could, too. He was in error there, however, and Louis became champion.

At this point Schmeling was almost champion, for he was obviously the new champion's master. For this reason he was again postponed while Louis fought Tommy Farr, of Wales.

There was a sort of popular understanding that Schmeling would surely get a bout with the winner for the fairest bauble some time this fall, but popular understandings are not legal and binding, and everyone with any knowledge of pugilistic diplomacy knew that the winner of the Louis-Farr fight, whoever it might be, would break a hand and be unable to recover from this injury and train adequately to meet Schmeling this year.

Sure enough, Louis broke a hand, and, moreover, Mr. Mike Jacobs, the promoter, decided that the situation had now become sufficiently confused to warrant the holding of a heavyweight elimination tournament, which is an invention of the late Tex Rickard.

• • • •

WHILE THE CURRENT heavyweights are eliminating one another next winter, Louis will retire to await the decision of fate, and thus Schmeling is postponed for the third time. There is also a strong possibility that he will be eliminated during the winter, whether he enters the tournament or not. If he should enter it and win, that would automatically disqualify him for a championship fight next spring, according to the tradition which confers the logical contendership on the gladiator who is eliminated most. If he should stand aloof from the tournament, he would be postponed again while Louis met the logical contender in response to great popular demand.

For clarity it is best to regard pugilism as a miniature of international diplomacy and to apply to the profession all the duplicity, hypocrisy, the vicious cynicism, dishonesty and treachery that nations, and particularly the dictatorships, employ in their dealings with one another.

It is not strictly analogous, but the case of Mussolini and Abyssinia has points of similarity. For reasons of their own the Italians brought Abyssinia into the League of Nations, agreed not to resort to war and further agreed to impose boycott measures on any nation that did.

Mr. Jacobs, the promoter, welcomed Schmeling to competition in the belief that Louis would lick him—a belief which Adolf Hitler shared. But when Schmeling unexpectedly beat Louis and Hitler suddenly discovered that the swarthy brunet with the narrow black eyes and high cheek bones was a true, blond Aryan it was deemed inadvisable to permit him to become champion lest he become unbearably independent and dictatorial, as the Reich did when the conquering nations carelessly permitted Hitler to rearm.

• • • •

IN MUSSOLINI'S CASE the League of Nations was so old and the popular sentiments of the hour had been so far forgotten that he could ignore his promises, just as the promises to Schmeling and his plain rights in the case have been ignored. Mussolini then attacked a fellow member of the League at a distance of 3,000 miles in defense of the gates of Rome, conquered the country, and by sheer gall bullied the world into acceptance of the act. The world didn't approve, but decided that it was another of those things, and just let it go.

Similarly, the public has regarded Schmeling's case as another of those things, not forgetting, however, that he behaved the same way toward Jack Sharkey when he was champion.

Unquestionably, Herr Schmeling has been denied his rights, like Abyssinia and China and the minorities in Germany. Pugilism was called by one of its champions the dirtiest game of all, but that was ignorance speaking. International relations necessarily are dirtier because they are bigger. But, pound for pound, neither Italy, Japan nor Schmeling's Hitler himself can outrotten the manly art.

"How're things with you, Ivan?"

"Well, we're ahead of last year. Shootings are up 10 per cent, which is always a good sign things are booming. And you?"

"I can't complain. Sedition accusations have shown a sharp drop but this may be just a natural midsummer condition. I look for a big increase in denunciations as soon as Stalin gets back from his vacation. I see you threw open the new wing of Factory B last week. Got some big orders?"

"No. We're only using it for storing suspicions."

"Storing suspicions?"

"Yes, every day the Government notifies us of some new suspicions against company executives and they pile up so fast we had to have more room to stack 'em. That's quite a big addition you're putting on your Moscow plant."

"Oh, that one! It's the training department for executive understudies. Have to have fresh men ready to step into major positions daily, you know. We lost about 100 executives during the last fiscal year by summary execution and our August statement shows we have about 200 superintendents, bosses, et cetera, under charges of sabotage, espionage, et cetera."

"That's a good man you have in Ivanowitch, your new vice president in charge of foreign trade, Igor."

"How's that new gadget for farm tractors going?"

"It's such a tremendous success I'm afraid it will go hard with me."

"They say every farm in Russia is crying for them. I hear it cuts down the cost of operation 45 per cent."

"Unfortunately, yes."

"Why unfortunately?"

"Well, somebody is bound to improve on it and cut down the cost of operation 50 per cent. You know what will happen then . . . I'll be charged with having turned out an inferior product and probably shot immediately. By the way, is there anything to the morning paper report that you have been offered the presidency of that new automobile plant, the largest in all the Russias?"

"Yes that's the plant that makes the car Stalin has just chosen for his latest model."

"Are you taking the job?"

"Not on your life! Suppose the one Stalin has should stall on a hill?????"

Germany's Interest In Colonies

Pan-German Dream Explains Demands, Writer Says.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHATEVER ELSE one may say of the Nazis, they are a busy lot of propagandists and missionaries, never permitting the outside world to forget them. The Stuermer publishing house now brings out another book on the colonial question, entitled "Our Colonies," and hardly a week passes without a reference to it.

A few years ago someone coined the phrases, "The Haves" and "The Have-Nots," and the Nazi propagandists took them up joyfully. With few natural resources, they declared, Germany needs colonies to supply lacking raw materials. Germany is overpopulated, lands across the sea have closed their doors, and the only outlet for a population-surplus is colonies. If that outlet were not furnished, "the boiler would explode," that is, there would be war.

The question is yet purely academic. One scans the list of former German colonies in vain to find one whose mandate-holder—in other words, owner: there's no use in maintaining a fiction—would give it back. Assuming, however, that all obstacles to such return were removed, let us consider the reasons advanced by Germany to support her demand. These are, as stated, that she needs colonies as a source of raw material and as an outlet for surplus population.

Neither Argument Bears Examination.

NEITHER argument can bear examination. The raw materials furnished by the German colonies were insignificant and can be had more cheaply elsewhere; not enough Germans would settle in the colonies to populate a city as large as Weimar, with its 50,000 inhabitants. The real reasons are political and military, especially military—war materials, not raw materials.

With few exceptions, the possession of colonies has never been a national economic asset for any country. Great industrial undertakings, individual capitalists and bankers have profited by them, but at the expense of the masses of the people of their countries.

In German colonial history, one finds the same names cropping up everywhere: Warburg, Hoesch, Prince Egon zu Fuerstenberg, Schwabach, von Siemens, von Mendelssohn, Delbrueck, Prince Hohenlohe-Oehringen, and, of course, Krupp—great bankers and industrialists. And to make it possible for these and like men to earn large profits, the German empire's subsidies to the colonial administration had reached more than a quarter of a billion dollars up to the outbreak of the World War.

This total, moreover, does not include the colonial budgets of the imperial post and marine. This great sum, in other words, was paid by German taxpayers to increase the wealth of the wealthy.

Speaking in the Reichstag on January 20, 1885, Baron von and zu Frankenstein, a Junker, said:

My political friends and I are of the opinion that the colonial policy will bring material advantages to a very small part of the people. We are especially of the opinion that the agricultural population can hope for no or almost no profit from the colonial policy. We believe that the profits will be concentrated on a small part of big industry and shipping.

History Proved Baron To Be Correct.

EVENTS PROVED the correctness of the baron's prophecy. One of today's German colonial propagandists, Dr. Manfred Sell, commenting on the regular deficit of the colonial budgets ("ihre durchgaengige passive Tendenz") in his book, "The New Colonial Policy," declares that the arguments against the colonies based on this deficit "leaves unanswered the question whether the state's subvention for colonies is not offset by a much greater gain for private economic undertakings." That is, plainly put, taxpayers' money should be used to enrich these "private economic undertakings."

Germany's trade with her colonies was inconsequential. Total imports from them in 1913 had a value of $13,571,000, total exports to them of $12,666,660, making a grand total of $26,237,660. In the same year Germany's total foreign trade amounted to $5,333,333,333. The colonial trade thus made up less than one-half of 1 per cent—.47 per cent, to be exact. That colonial production cannot for a long time be materially increased has been incautiously admitted by Sell and other propagandists.

The phrases about "The Haves" and "The Have-Nots" seem to have been widely accepted as setting forth a situation which calls for correction. Actually, they are nonsense. America, with vast stocks of cotton on hand, would be only too happy if some "Have-Not" would take them off her hands—and at a price which, considering the subventions which are paid for colonial administration, would be lower than what colonial cotton would cost. Only in time of war would "The Have-Nots" be handicapped—and it is hardly the duty of civilized peoples to make the waging of war easier.

"A million blacks who could be trained as soldiers . . ."

Uninitiated Tricked By Trade Statistics.

PRECISELY as the raw material argument looks valid on its face to persons ignorant of colonial trade statistics, so the demand for an outlet for surplus population looks valid to persons ignorant of colonial population statistics. Germany has 360.7 inhabitants to the square mile, the United States only 49.3. But the population argument is quite as fallacious as the other. In 1913, after almost 30 years of colonial ownership, there were but 24,389 whites in all the 949,000 square miles of the German colonies, and this figure included all officials, soldiers, police, missionaries, and even the Japanese in German New Guinea.

Other countries have had a similar experience. There were only some 8,000 Italians in all the Italian colonies, and only a handful of these, some few hundreds, were bona fide settlers. Belgium, one of the pioneer colonial countries, has the densest population in the world—699 to the square mile. Great Britain, with the greatest colonial possessions, has nevertheless 504.7 inhabitants per square mile, a far greater density than Germany's. Why have the "surplus populations" of these countries not found an outlet in the colonies?

The answer is that whites will not settle in tropical lands. History has proved it, and German authorities have admitted it. Dr. Heinrich Schnee, last governor of German East Africa, writes in his book, "Does Germany Need Colonies?": "Large parts of our protectorates in the tropics were not suitable for a permanent settlement for Europeans."

Before the war the Imperial Colonial Office estimated that all the German colonies together could furnish a tolerable existence to at most 60,000 settlers, and Dr. Sell writes that "in the best case some tens of thousands" can look to finding an existence there.

Emigration Figures Reveal Colonization.

A STRIKING commentary on the "people without room" thesis is afforded by German emigration statistics. There were 970,000 emigrants in the decade from 1861 to 1870; 595,000 from 1871 to 1880, and 529,000 from 1881 to 1890. But the number dropped to 269,000 in the following decade, although Germany's population had increased in the previous two decades from 49,000,000 to 64,000,000. It is significant further that of the 269,000 emigrants from 1901 to 1910, only 569 went to the German colonies.

Why this marked decrease of emigration in the face of an increasing population? And why did the bulk of the emigrants come, as they did, from the most thinly settled parts of the country, where great landed estates are the rule? The explanation is found in the increasing industrialization and growing prosperity of the country, and in the gradual decline of feudal conditions.

That there is still "room" in Germany is evident from the holdings of the great estate-owners. More than a quarter of all farm land, a total of more than 25,000,000 acres, is made up of farms of 1,235 acres or more, held by less than one-fifth of 1 per cent of all German farmers. It was these owners who, with the great industrialists and the deluded middle class, put Hitler in power.

They have not been molested, although the masses that supported the Nazis expected that big estates would be broken up. Why they have not been molested is evident when one glances at a few names of owners. Thirteen men, headed by former Kaiser Wilhelm, who has roundly 240,000 acres, own together 1,253,000 acres. The first of the high royalties in Germany to become an ardent Nazi was His Serene Highness the Duke of Saxe-Coburg. He owns over 25,000 acres. One of Hermann Goering's closest friends is the Prince of Hesse. He has over 17,000 acres. Reich Minister von Schwerin-Krosigk has a neat little farm of about 9,600 acres, and Reich War Minister von Blomberg calls some 5,800 acres his own.

Three Reasons Block Return Of Possessions.

CONFRONTED with refutations of Germany's arguments, Dr. Joseph Goebbels said some months ago: "If the colonies are so worthless, why don't you say: 'Take back your junk?'"

There are three reasons why this civilized world can not say this: moral, political and military. A world which has been shocked by the brutalities of the Hitler government toward a helpless minority of its own citizens can not assume the responsibility for handing helpless native peoples over to such a government. What the Nazis' attitude toward "inferior races" is has been frankly set forth by many spokesmen. One of these is Dr. Paul Rohrbach, a former democrat, who became a Nazi overnight. In his book, "Germany's Colonial Demands," he writes:

The African races are not only temporarily but for all time inferior to us, and are therefore destined to be led by us . . . We demand the right to a part of the labor-power of the native African races . . . The native gains a moral right to exist only when he learns to create higher values in the service of the higher race . . .

Mildness in the battle against the black man is cruelty to the white man. The black recognizes the superior authority of the white man only from the moment when he has felt the white man's superior strength. When he has had that lesson, and is treated in such a manner that he does not forget it, much can be got out of him.

In 1904 the Hereros in German Southwest Africa revolted. Thousands were slaughtered by machineguns, and some 20,000 men, women and children were driven into the Omahaka desert, where they starved to death. In the following year the Matumbis arose in East Africa. The colonial administration admitted later that some 26,000 natives had been killed in putting down the revolt. Prof. Schillings, a colonial authority, estimated the total dead at over 150,000, most of whom died of thirst in the bush after their villages had been burned and their crops destroyed.

Nazis Point Toward Franco-British Split.

THE POLITICAL and military aim of the Nazi has been set forth. First of all, it is hoped to bring about dissension between Great Britain and France. Sell declares that "the colonial question means danger for England . . . It is calculated to plunge England into antagonism with her daughter-states." But on the same page one finds that the demand for colonies "burdens France with problems" which will make much trouble for her. It also "serves English interests. It makes German diplomacy a worthy ally for England."

A million blacks who would be trained as soldiers are worth much effort. So also are naval bases.

The threat that "the boiler will explode" if the colonies be not returned can impress only persons unfamiliar with German history and with the character of the present German regime. Sir Austen Chamberlain, in his "Politics From the Inside: an Epistolary Chronicle, 1906-1914," points out that in those last eight years before the war Great Britain did all it could to placate Germany by granting concessions in Africa and elsewhere, but the Germans only increased their demands and became steadily more intransigent, whereas France was grateful for all favors.

In a speech in the first year of Hitler's reign, Winston Churchill asked whether any conceivable concessions could be made to Germany with any assurance that the Germans would then say, "We are now satisfied." He answered his own question in the negative. Wickham Steed spoke in the same vein. Both men know Germany.

Germany wants colonies merely as a further step toward effectuating the old Pan-German dream of subjugating the world.

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill appropriating $2,000,000 to restore Alaskan reindeer herds to the Eskimos and Indians. The bill makes it illegal for whites to operate herds.

Delegate Anthony Dimond, of Alaska, said the measure would "keep the Alaskan natives off the dole."

Texas Editor Urges Garner for President

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Longview, Tex., Sept. 2.—Carl L. Estes, publisher of the Longview News, this afternoon said of Vice President Garner:

"Kindly, shrewd and understanding, a Democrat who has no desire to substitute the autocracy of the masses for that of the classes, Cactus Jack Garner should be the next Presidential nominee for the party of Thomas Jefferson."

What Of War?

Neutrality For The United States.

PROF. BORCHARD and his collaborator believe that Washington's Farewell Address, which they quote at the beginning of their book, is still the soundest guide for American foreign policy. They speak bitterly of the failure of our Government to stand firm on our neutral rights against the Allies during the first years of the World War, and they regard "collective security" and "the enforcement of peace" as seductive phrases which threaten not only the neutrality but the independent existence of the United States.

They submit that the peace doctrines of 1919 and the machinery for carrying them into effect have been tried and found wanting and that, in the preservation of peace, embargoes and the taking of sides are far less important than "an honest intention to remain aloof from foreign conflict, a refusal to be stampeded by unneutral propaganda, a knowledge of the law and a capacity to stand upon it, meeting emergencies and problems not romantically but wisely."

• • • •

THE AUTHORS HAVE demonstrated convincingly that the directors of our foreign policy during the World War were almost from the beginning inclined to favor the Allies. They have not, however, in the opinion of this reviewer, proved their contention that the inclination of President Wilson and Messrs. Lansing, Page and House to favor the Allies was based on personal prejudices rather than upon an intelligent consideration of the vital interests of the United States. They call attention to the fact that the Scandinavian countries and The Netherlands, which suffered through submarine activities greater shipping losses, both human and material, than we did, "managed to stay out of the war." But they fail to note that those countries were in a geographical and economic situation which made it practically impossible for them, whatever the provocation from either side, to be other than neutral. Our Government had a choice. The northern European governments had none.

The choice we made may have been wrong, but those who criticize it should not overlook the fact that it was based upon a sincere conviction that a German victory would have been highly prejudicial to our vital national interests. Wilson and his advisers were not oblivious of Washington's caution against "the illusion of an imaginary common interest." They doubtless believed that we had with the Allies a "real common interest," the possibility of which was clearly recognized in the Farewell Address.

It may be conceded that we could have "managed to stay out of the war" if we had been neutral in thought, word and deed up to 1917, but it does not follow that our course during the first years of the war and our eventual entrance into the conflict were contrary to our best interests or to our best traditions. It is at least possible that, when the history of our era is viewed in proper perspective, our great mistakes of foreign policy will be seen to have occurred in the years just following the war rather than during the war.

• • • •

THE AUTHORS ADOPT the view of Judge John Bassett Moore: that we became involved in the World War "directly as the result of our undertaking to guarantee the safety of belligerent merchantmen and our taking the position that armed belligerent merchantmen were to be considered as peaceful vessels." They acknowledge the fact that merchant vessels flying the flag of a belligerent had the right, under rules of international law developed in the era of privateering, to carry defensive armament, but they argue that the appearance of the submarine as a commerce destroyer should have been promptly recognized as entailing the abandonment of this right. They go so far as to contend that the Government of the United States had no right to protest against the destrucion of American lives even upon an unarmed merchant vessel of belligerent nationality. In this they certainly go too far.

The fact that a ship on the high seas is for jurisdictional purposes treated as part of the territory of the country whose flag it flies does not break the tie between a passenger on that ship and the government to which he owes allegiance. An American on English soil is, of course, subject to the English courts, but he is not withdrawn from the diplomatic protection of his own government, upon proper occasions, either against English authorities or against a government whose aviators may injure him, in violation of international law, on English soil. An American passenger on an English merchant ship, during war between England and another country, is no less entitled to the protection of his own government upon proper occasions.

THE UNITED STATES, according to Prof. Borchard and Mr. Lage, "broke with its fundamental principles by the unprecedented decision to participate in a European war," and, as one consequence, "we now," they say, "respond easily to temptations to enforce policies formulated in other countries without our participation." It may be questioned whether we now respond so easily to such temptations as we did six months ago, when the authors' book went to press. Present indications are that the rest of the world is about as likely to follow our lead as we are to follow the lead of the rest of the world in cooperative measures for the preservation of peace.

The authors rain telling blows upon "the Noble Interventionists." They make it entirely clear that the institution of neutrality is not dead and that, despite "heterodox measures, such as the 1937 Pittman act, which are designed to insulate the United States from all contact with belligerent powers, but which are likely to have quite different effects," the way of neutrality is, in general, the American way.

"NEUTRALITY FOR THE UNITED STATES." by Edwin Borchard and William Potter Lage. (Yale University Press, $3.50).

G. B. STERN, whose first novel in several years, "Oleander River" will come out next month, writes that she has taken a house on an island in the River Thames . . . "The life is simple and healthy," reads her letter, "in and out of boats all the time" . . . She has recently returned from a short holiday in Denmark and Sweden and next month she hopes to go to the South of France to bathe in "the best sea of all" . . . Something should be done for the relief of these poor writers who slave away at their desks all day long trying to figure out where their next week's vacation is coming from . . .

"I HAVE OBSERVED with much interest and with varying emotions the different representations of 'Stella Dallas,'" comments the author, Olive Higgins Prouty . . . But that, Mrs. Prouty, was before Sam Goldwyn said "include the sensitive child out" . . .

Unique Lodge

The Indians who work for Uncle Sam in Washington have been organized by the American Federation of Government Employes. The group is known as "The American Indian Lodge, No. 420," and membership is restricted rigidly to those of Indian blood. It is the only lodge of original Americans in the Nation. And the A. F. G. E., which lays great stress on Americanism, is much pleased.

The recruiting of the group was done by G. V. Wickware, President Stengle's executive assistant. He told the Indians constantly to bear in mind their justifiable pride of ancestry and to work hard toward making their unique lodge one of the outstanding ones in the A. F. G. E. family.

Tribes represented in the lodge are Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Seneca, Chippewa, Chickasaw, Blackfeet, Arapaho, Stockbridge, Comanche, Kiowa, Sioux, Modoc, Alaskan, Pottowatomie, Kickapoo, Flathead, Oneida, Ottowa, Winnadago, Onondaga, Osage, Shawnee, Pueblo and Casso, names that would have made the early settlers look well to their powder.

Mr. Lloyd's Story

That active fellow who handles publicity for the Interior Department Recreation Association has wangled the officers into telling the story of their lives and, in instances, into expressions of their philosophies of life. First, he called on John H. Lloyd, an editorial assistant in the Office of Education. Step up, Mr. Lloyd:

"Many Government workers hold a job and go to college at the same time. In most instances when this is done, the job is a means to an end—a better education and a better job. I worked on a newspaper for 3½ years before coming to Washintgon to take a civil service position, and as the result of that experience obtained my present position. Instead of going to college for the purpose of studying for another type of work, I took up courses that I thought would reinforce me in doing the job assigned me.

"I believe that Government service is a co-operative task, and that unless all Government employes and all Government departments make a sound effort to co-operate as a unit in serving the American people there will be a resulting waste of time, labor and money. So often Government workers and agencies become self-centered, and close their eyes to what their fellow workers and departments are endeavoring to accomplish.

"We must realize that we are all a part of the whole, and the more efficiently and co-operatively each performs his duty, the better Government service will be and the more the citizens will respect it. Government service needs to be sold to the American people. This is the job of every Government employe. Most of us know what is being done, but so few of us go to the trouble of explaining to those not in the Government service why we are doing this or that or the other thing.

We must all feel the responsibility of trying to cancel in the minds of many people the misapprehension that all Government workers are loafers, political appointees, being paid high salaries to do jobs that are unnecessary and that cause taxes to be high. If we believe that we are sincerely serving the American public, let us make the fact known."

Harry G. Hitner, editor, Washington Federal Bulletin, sends this column some of his personal views on G. A. O. reorganization, which are quoted, as follows:

"Numerious inquiries as to the probable disposition of the troublesome G. A. O. reorganization have been directed to the writer and attempt will be made to analyze what has to date happened in Congress and leave it to the reader to form his own opinion. In the most recent Supreme Court decision of Springer vs. Philippine Islands (277 U. S. 189) it was held that legislative power, as distinguished from executive power, is the authority to make laws, but not to enforce them or appoint the agents charged with the duty of such enforcement. The latter are executive functions. Both the House and Senate Committees on Government organization are on record as recognizing this important principle. Main difference to be ironed out at the next session of Congress is whether G. A. O. will be abolished and duties split between newly created Auditor General and Treasury Department or whether G. A. O. is to remain as it is with the head of Audit Division becoming Auditor General in charge of the Audit Division which would be renamed "Office of the Audit General." New job would pay $10,000 per year. The Comptroller General would also continue at $10,000 per year, Auditor General would be appointed by the President for 15 years, removable by joint act of Congress. Comptroller General would be appointed by the President without term and removable at pleasure. It is expected that any action to be taken will resolve around these two plans."

Experts Predict Upset in U. S. Trade Balance

1937 Imports Likely to Exceed Exports Despite Gain in July.

American exports exceeded imports during July but commerce department officials reiterated yesterday the country may have an unfavorable trade balance for 1937.

The department reported July exports exceeded imports by $1,836,000. This compared with a $14,666,000 excess of imports in July, 1936.

For the first seven months of this year, however, the trade balance swung $144,819,000 toward the import side, compared with an unfavorable balance of $24,214,000 in the corresponding period of 1936.

To attain a favorable balance for the year, United States sales in world markets would have to top purchases by an average of $29,000,000 a month for the final five months. In the last five months of 1936, the favorable balance averaged only $11,000,000 a month.

Although exports customarily are heaviest in the fall, when agricultural products are shipped, officials said it is doubtful they could offset the import balance already reported.

Exports aggregated $1,803,829,000 in the first seven months of 1937, an increase of $468,478,000 over the period last year. At $1,948,648,000, imports were up $589,083,000.

In July, exports of $267,185,000 compared with $180,390,000 in July a year ago. Imports aggregated $265,349,000 and $195,056,000 for the same months.

Department officials also estimated American tourists will spend $600,000,000 in Europe this year. This total would be the largest since 1930.

An analysis of 1936 travel showed Americans paid $497,000,000 in foreign countries for merchandise, hotel lodging and services. Of the total, $228,000,000 went to Canada.

Phone Users Dial 14 Numbers in 1,000 Wrong, Club Told

"Hello. Is Charlie there?"
"Charlie who?"
"Say, what number is this?"
"This is National 4200."
"Oh, I'm sorry—wrong number."

Out of every 1,000 phone calls made over dial telephones, an average of 14 are wrong numbers, Paul V. B. Heiss, of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., told members of the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday. Only four of these are attributable to operators, Heiss said.

The average of wrong numbers increases to 17 out of 1,000 on manual phones, Heiss explained, because people are more prone to give a number to the operator without looking it up than when they have to dial their own number.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Sacrifice Bidding.

One of the hardest things for beginners to understand is the principle of sacrifice bidding. The object of the good player is to win the maximum on good hands and to restrict the loss on poor hands. When he must take a loss he considers carefully whether he will lose fewer points by playing an unmakeable contract (even doubled) than by allowing the opponents to play at a contract of their own.

South's bidding in the hand below is typical of good sacrifice bidding. West would have made four spades for a score below the line of 120 points together with the value of a game (which is worth about 300 points). By playing the hand at five hearts South contrived to restrict the loss to only 300 points altogether.

East, dealer.

	♠ A 7 ♡ 10 6 4 ◇ 9 8 ♣ Q 9 7 5 4 2
♠ K 10 9 6 4 ♡ K 7 ◇ K 7 4 ♣ J 10 8	North West East South	♠ 8 5 3 2 ♡ 9 8 5 ◇ A 6 ♣ A K 6 3
	♠ Q J ♡ A Q J 3 2 ◇ Q J 10 5 3 2 ♣ —

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	3 ◇	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ◇	Double	5 ♡
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of clubs. Dummy played the Queen, East, the King, and South ruffed. Declarer now led the Queen of spades, West covered with the King, and dummy won with the Ace. The trump finesse was taken. West winning with the King. Declarer ruffed the continuation of the ten of clubs and led a low diamond toward the eight-spot. West hopped up with the King of diamonds and returned the ten of spades. Declarer won with the Jack of spades and led another diamond. East won with the Ace of diamonds, and at this point had to make an important decision.

The bidding marked West with a five-card spade suit. South consequently must have started with only two spades. Since he could have no clubs, South was also marked with 11 cards in the red suits. The play to the diamond suit made it quite certain that there were no further tricks to be secured in that suit. The only hope for the defense, therefore, was to secure another trump trick. After some thought, East came to the correct decision. Despite the fact that he was setting up dummy's entire suit, East laid down the Ace of clubs.

South had to trump and had subsequently to concede a trump trick to East, no matter how he played the hand. Nevertheless, South was well satisfied with his contract since his sacrifice had saved him well over 100 points. A less thoughtful defense would have permitted him to steal a game from his opponents for a mere 100 points.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

At a fashionable Washington dinner often five or six different sorts of table manners are on view, from as many different lands . . . Each harpooning the food in a different way, each in impeccable good form, each getting results.

* * * *

Inevitably, the Capital is a city of souvenirs. . . . Most popular are salt-shakers and thermometers a la the Washington Monument, inkwells and paper weights and ashtrays modeled after the Capitol—miniatures which give the tourist a heady thrill of power, as he salts his pork chops or flicks ashes off his cigarette.

* * * *

One member of Congress buys 6-inch keys to the city at 15 cents by the gross, presents them to visitors from back home. . . . Each key has a thermometer which he deems useful in ascertaining the temperature of his constituents. . . . Alas, these thermometers are often inaccurate.

* * * *

"—gives him a sense of power"

Among some of the "tory" gentlefolk John L. Lewis is oftener a target for the gentle razz than Mr. Roosevelt . . . The latest myth about him is that he musses his hair before posing for a picture or making a labor speech, but carries two pocket combs and keeps his hair well-slicked at de luxe teas and cocktail parties.

* * * *

Some of the golf and country clubs offer reduced rates to Senators and Representatives. But one or two of the more exclusive clubs, so the story goes in the cloakrooms, are not particularly anxious to ensnare the people's anointed even at the full fee.

* * * *

There's a heroic equestrian statue in Washington with only one of the horse's feet on the ground . . . Maybe one of the sur-realistic sculptors can produce a statue of a heroic New Dealer without any feet on the ground!

* * * *

Girlish bewilderment at the Wardman's Metronome Room: "I wonder how old a girl should be before she can have dates with married men?" . . . A snort at O'Donnell's seafood rendezvous: "Too many of these brain-trusters are vegetarians!" . . . Prophecy in the House restaurant: "I'll bet some district elects a real babe to the House in the excitement next year."

"—six sorts of manners"

'Iron Lung' Dilemma Held Unlikely in D. C.

Barring epidemics, the chances are 100 to 1 or so against the Denver dilemma ever being duplicated in Washington.

The Denver dilemma concerned two children who could not live without the "iron lung." There was only one in Denver. Washington has two Drinker respirators, one at Children's Hospital and the other at Gallinger Hospital. Neither is used more than once or twice a year, it was said.

Old Hack Law Invoked Upon Funeral Autos

3 Arrested for Failure to Designate Sedans as 'Sightseers.'

In their efforts to find new revenue for the District, tax and traffic officials are trying to bring into force a hacking law that is 40 years old and put a funeral procession into the same legal classification as a sightseeing trip, W. W. Chambers, Washington funeral director, said last night.

Chambers will appear in Traffic Court at 10 a. m. today to answer charges of violating provisions which require drivers of funeral cars to wear identification tags and funeral cars to have a license marked with the letter "S."

Two other undertakers have been arrested for violating the same provisions. They are P. J. Saffell, whose case has been deferred until September 9, and W. F. Taylor, president of George W. Wise Co., whose case also will be heard this month.

Classed as "For Hire" Autos.

Among provisions of the old-new regulation is one which states funeral cars and ambulances are in a class with other motor vehicles for hire and must pay an operation tax of $25.

Both Chambers and Saffell have said they do not object to the $25 tax, but they consider the effort to "brand a funeral" and tag the drivers "utterly ridiculous."

According to the ruling, the identification tag which each driver must wear canot be hidden, but must be worn "upon the right breast of his outer garment."

Several of the city's 80 undertakers have met the specifications since the drive to enforce them began about two months ago, but general disapproval has been voiced.

Explains Origin of Law.

"The old and antiquated law which they are trying to invoke against us was inaugurated more than 40 years ago at a time when some of the night-line hack drivers were embroiled in several robberies," Chambers said. "It was not intended for the regular livery stable keepers even in those days.

"My father was in the livery stable business and I know that funeral hacks were never asked to carry identification pictures of their drivers or other undignified markings.

"Undertakers do not run regular vehicles for hire in the sense that taxicab drivers do. We run a contract business, and furnish as many cars as are needed.

"If we wear sightseeing tags, strangers will walk to our cars while they are in front of churches and funeral houses—expecting to be able to hire them as cabs."

Chambers said the arrest of his driver occurred in front of a church, but that he was permitted to continue on to the cemetery for the funeral.

New D.C. Hospital For Tuberculosis To Open Sept. 16

Plans for opening the new adult tuberculosis hospital at Glenn Dale, Md., September 16 or 17 and for consolidating its operation with the children's sanatorium were announced yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

The merger means that the children's hospital will not be limited to children, but that the combined capacity of 700 beds will be used to meet the need, whether of adults or children.

Dr. Ruhland said the 150 patients in the adult tuberculosis hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets will be transferred.

The question of what agency will get the abandoned hospital has yet to be decided by the Commissioners. The board of education has asked that it be given the site for a normal school.

The board of public welfare proposed that the hospital be converted into a maternity ward for Gallinger Hospital.

Red Cross Hopes to Slash Fatality Toll Here by Course.

Washington policemen are being shown how to haul in drowning persons and resuscitate them in a life-saving class launched recently by the American Red Cross.

Every morning at Anacostia pool 55 rookie officers change into swimming trunks, dive into the water and go through a strenuous two-hour routine whose results, it is hoped, will reduce the toll of tragedies along the Capital waterfront.

Most of the men are fine swimmers when they begin the course, according to Robert Duncan, Red Cross instructor in charge. With such good material, it is not difficult to teach them the various ways of breaking death holds and giving artificial respiration. Each policeman receives the standard senior Red Cross badge upon completing the course.

Lieut. Walter T. Storm, head of the police training school, is enthusiastic over the success of the life-saving class. Lessons may be continued during the winter if an indoor pool is obtainable, he said.

"A police officer naturally is the first person of authority to reach the scene of an accident," Duncan said. "We feel that if all members of the force are qualified Red Cross life savers, many fatalities can be avoided."

Cafeteria Bandit Man Who Talked Way Out of Arrest

Washington police last night knew the name of the man wanted for the holdup of the S. and W. Cafeteria opposite the Treasury Tuesday night and were ready, they said, to connect him with about 25 other robberies.

One member of the detective force talked with the bandit, it was learned, on July 27, more than a month before the robbery.

The detective stopped the hunted man "on a hunch" in the 900 block Massachusetts avenue, but the youth showed satisfactory credentials and the officer finally let him go.

Two men were being held last night in connection with the holdup, believed to be accomplices of the bandit.

A 17-year-old girl who was questioned at intervals over a period of 36 hours was released last night.

The District Court yesterday was asked by the Counes & Raptis Corporation, the firm painting the interior of the Postoffice Building, to enjoin enforcement of a Labor Department ruling that it must pay painters' wages to scaffolding erectors and movers. Prince Georges Citizens Seek Public Hospital Federation Names Group to Make Survey for Campaign.

The Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations, last night, at Bladensburg, took the first step toward raising funds for a county hospital. The county does not have a hospital. All patients are brought to Washington hospitals, the county paying the local institutions from $15,000 to $20,000 a year.

The question was broached by Frank Fierstein, of Landover, who reminded the federation that Prince Georges has a population of 70,000. The erection of a hospital, he said, would save the county money.

A committee, headed by John Riggles, of Lanham, was appointed to make a survey.

The federation adopted a resolution urging the Maryland State Roads Commission to erect crossing lights at the B. & O. crossing over Defense highway at Bladensburg. Early Wednesday a man was killed there by a freight train.

Blair Riggles, of Decatur Heights, chairman of the roads committee, was instructed to determine how much is charged against the county by the State roads commission for the maintenance of lateral, or connecting, roads in the county. Civic leaders have received hundreds of letters protesting the cost of maintaining the roads and urging that they be turned back to the counties.

U. S. Employes Here Decline to 115,409 Total

Government workers in the District were 555 fewer June 30 than on January 1, the semiannual personnel statistics report of the United States Civil Service Commission revealed yesterday.

Of the total of 841,664 civil employes in the executive branch of the Government on June 30, 115,409 are working in Washington, 46,254 women and 69,155 men.

The Government service has gained more than 10,000 employes this year. The increase, the report said, was caused principally by employment on construction work and in the Postoffice service.

Of the total employes, 682,164, or 81 per cent, were men, and 159,500 were women.

A total of 532,073, or 63 per cent of all civil employes, had civil service jobs.

N. C. Man Is Held As Prison Fugitive

A man described by police as an underworld Houdini was held here last night, accused of escape from three Southern chain gangs.

He was Willis C. Steward, 32, alleged robber, of Raleigh, N. C. On a tip, Detective Richard J. Cox sought him in a house in the 500 block of Fifth street northwest. Davis leaped out of a window, but Cox caught him.

Absence of System In Handling Traffic Draws Hazen's Fire

Parley to Map Safety Drive Is Called by Commissioner.

Uniform Fine System Is Proposed; A.A.A. Hits Trial Delays.

All District officials charged with the control of traffic will be called to a meeting in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen next week to discuss an apparent lack of co-ordination in Washington's highway safety program, it was learned last night.

Police authorities, traffic heads, Police Court judges and city prosecutors will be invited to the conference—the first of its kind ever called here.

Apparently determined to bring a greater degree of co-operation among Washington's traffic agencies, Hazen will urge officials to compare notes and agree on a "get together" policy of enforcement and punishment.

Uniform Penalties Proposed.

A system of uniform penalties for all types of traffic offenses will be discussed, it was further reported, and members of the Police Court Assistant Corporation Counsel's office will be asked to explain reputed instances where charges have been reduced or cases indefinitely postponed.

Preliminary arrangements for the meeting were started yesterday at a conference between Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Inspector William E. Holmes, police traffic supervisor. Van Duzer and Holmes are members of a committee appointed by Hazen to plan the traffic discussion.

Proposals to invite suggestions from judges and prosecutors were made last month at a meeting of all District police inspectors in Van Duzer's office.

Van Duzer announced yesterday that traffic accidents throughout the city dropped approximately 4 per cent during August as compared to July. Personal injuries also showed a decrease, Van Duzer said, but fatalities increased by one.

Co-operation Need Cited.

With the District's traffic "danger months" still ahead, Hazen and Van Duzer will plead for a continuing, co-ordinated safety program during the balance of the year.

"Rigid enforcement alone will not help us to bring Washington a new safety record," said Holmes yesterday. "Arrests for major violations are useless if the courts and prosecutors refuse to co-operate."

And at the same time last night, the American Automobile Association charged local courts with violating an act of Congress by failure to hold night sessions.

Under the traffic act of March 3, 1925, said A. A. A. spokesmen, judges may hold separate sessions "but the holding of such sessions shall be so arranged that the court shall be open continuously from 9 o'clock antemeridian until 11 o'clock postmeridian each day, Sundays excepted, for the trial of cases involving violations of traffic laws and regulations."

In the appropriation acts of 1929 and 1932 there was a special provision stipulating that none of the money appropriated should be spent for holding court open after 6 p. m., said the A. A. A.

18 Added Employes, 25 New Lights Asked in Bureau Budget.

Asking 18 additional employes, four of them temporary, and traffic signals for 25 more intersections, the director of vehicles and traffic yesterday submitted estimates aggregating $254,730 for the next fiscal year to the District Commissioners.

The budget represents an increase of $59,290 or approximately 31 per cent over current appropriations.

New positions asked comprise four additional clerk-typists, two additional examiners, two additional junior engineers, six traffic checkers and four workmen in traffic shop.

In support of the request for more examiners and engineers, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and cited the recommendations of the House sub-committee on District traffic which made a study here two years ago.

25 New Lights Asked.

Regarding the 25 new traffic lights, the director said that surveys show there are 196 intersections where they would be justified. That means that at least 1,000 vehicles and 250 pedestrians cross the intersection within seven hours.

"Our records show that accidents decrease after lights are installed as during the same period previous to the installation," the report stated.

The director also proposes to bring the traffic signal system up to date by installing flexible progressive lights at 17 intersections. This will cost $6,000.

A sum of $13,000 is asked to renew and replace obsolete and worn traffic signs, and $1,000 is requested to finance publicity and educational work.

Other Requests.

Other estimates received by the Commissioners included those of the executive office and the superintendence of the District Building.

The executive office submitted a budget of $48,180, and the purchasing division of the same office $57,440. Both represented only slight increases and called for no new employes.

The superintendent of the District Building asked for $98,000, which is $1,300 over current appropriations. The increase was to furnish guards and labor for 220 John Marshall place.

The Abbey Theater Irish Players to Visit Capital; New York Announces Return of Noted Acting Group

Popular Artists Will Present Familiar Repertoire With Three Plays New to America Added; Holiday Previews Loom; Civic Theater Plans Its Season; Singer Makes Quick Jump to Washington; Notes.

FROM that stalwart advocate of the living drama, Mr. Claude P. Greneker, one of Broadway's veteran showmen, comes a bulletin of great promise to the theatergoers of the National Capital.

BELL.

Mr. Greneker, speaking on behalf of the Select Theaters Corporation, which is by way of being the Shuberts, announces that the world-famous Abbey Theater Irish Players from Dublin once more will offer their repertoire of "sparkling comedies and thrilling dramas" in Washington this season, following their run in New York.

It seems hat the Abbey Theater Players will say "good-by" to Ireland and "hello" to America in a broadcast from the Abbey Theater, Dublin, on Sunday evening, September 19, when they will present J. M. Synge's "Riders to the Sea." This will be over a Columbia coast-to-coast network, from which, I am reliably informed—I hope not—this city will be omitted by reason of previous station commitments.

At any rate, the Abbey Players are scheduled to arrive in New York on September 26 and will open their American tour in the Ambassador Theater, New York City, on Thursday night, September 30, with the first presentation in this country of "Katie Roche," a comedy by Teresa Deevy. They will appear in Washington, says Mr. Greneker, following the limited New York engagement, although Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, the sartorial saviour of E street, informs me that the Abbey Players do not as yet appear on his booking sheets. There is enough open time to accommodate the Players on, or about, the date they probably would wish to appear here, however, so all may yet be well.

Included in their repertoire are J. M. Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars" and "Juno and the Paycock;" Lenox Robinson's "The Far-Off Hills" and "Drama at Inish;" George Shiel's "The New Gossoon," Paul V. Carroll's "Things That Are Caesar's;" Teresa Deevy's "Katie Roche" and "Temporal Powers" and "Silver Jubilee," by Gormac O'Daly. The last three never have been presented in America.

For this American tour, the Players are bringing with them complete productions, including scenery, furniture and all theatrical properties, thus insuring presentations of their plays identically as performed in the nationally endowed Abbey Theater in Dublin.

In the company coming to the United States are many of Ireland's outstanding artists, including Denis O'Dea, F. J. McCormick, Eileen Crowe, Maureen Delaney, May Craig, Michael J. Dolan, Arthur Shields, Aideen O'Connor and P. J. Carolan.

Washingtonians familiar with the work of this foremost of the world's acting organizations will regret the omission from this list of principals of the name of Barry Fitzgerald, to this column's eyes and ears one of the most gifted actors that ever stepped upon a stage. The last seen of Mr. Fitzgerald locally was as a member of the cast of the film version of "The Plough and the Stars," in which, if a tricky memory serves correctly—as it frequently does not—Eileen Crowe also appeared.

Henceforth, until the matter finally is made definite, drama lovers of the Capital will waft devout orisons on high that that open time at the National may remain open until the Abbey Players at least are penciled in.

* * * *

It is Cadet Edwin "Buddy" Dobyns, of the Loew uniformed forces, who serves as emissary of Ray Bell—no relation—to bring me a complimentary copy of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel of "Stella Dallas," which, I think, makes two that I have. However, I probably will never be able to find the original so the added starter comes along opportunely and will enable me to refresh a lagging memory of the story of mother love in which Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley, Alan Hale and numerous others soon will be seen on the screen in the Samuel Goldwyn talking film version of the work that was such an overwhelming hit as a silent picture as to bolster the late Belle Bennett, Lois Moran and Jean Hersholt to eventual stardom. I shall enjoy reading it again, if possible before the new celluloid rendition is screened for the drama desks next Tuesday afternoon.

* * *

And that reminds me. Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, has had the temerity to crash the Labor Day holiday with a Monday afternoon preview screening of "100 Men and a Girl," the second starring vehicle for that marvelously gifted juvenile songstress, Deanna Durbin.

Hot on the heels, as the saying goes, of his telephone message to this effect—evidently Master Meakin lacked the courage to convey it in person—a welcome caller upon this desk with Miss Beulah Livingstone, Universal's erudite itinerant publicist, burdened almost to the breaking point with pictures and text relating to this prentenious production. Miss Livingstone confides that "100 Men and a Girl" is a "real picture."

The "100 men" of the title, one suspects, are the members of Dr. Leopold Stokowski's symphony orchestra and "the girl" Miss Durbin, in whom the famous conductor perceives a talent of vast promise. Mischa Auer and Adolphe Menjou are other pivotal members of the cast. More of this Tuesday, I am afraid.

* * * *

Personal aside to "Butch," an otherwise anonymous September morn correspondent: Nice of you to read the column. It happens, unfortunately, that all of the items in which you seem most interested came up while I was doing my annual bit of rusticating at Hains Point. May I suggest that you reload and fire again—with better aim next time. Thank you too much, anyhow.

* * * *

At a recent meeting of the board of governors and the new director, F. Cowles Strickland, of the Washington Civic Theater, tentative plans were laid for a season of seven plays during the coming year, all to be presented in the Wardman Park Theater. The opening of the season was set for the first week in October. Arrangements also were dis-

Two Who Add Punch to a Title

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 2.—One of Hollywood's major asininities is the contempt in which producers hold the extra. Our studio Jupiters are perpetually wailing about the lack of fresh talent—they send their so-called talent scouts to the far ends of the earth to search for new faces; they fight with one another for the services of any player—no matter how unsuitable for the screen—who has clicked in a stage play; they spend millions experimenting with blue-bloods whose sole claim to acting ability is a listing in the social register. But not one producer has enough common sense to dig for gold in the obvious mine—the 17,000 extras in their own "back yard."

CAROLE LOMBARD.

At least three thousand of Hollywood's extras are personable boys and girls, any one of whom might prove to be another Colbert, Gable, De Havilland or Taylor. They have ambition, determination and an innate love of acting or they would not keep up their struggle against almost hopeless odds. They have camera experience. But no one ever gives them an opportunity to show their ability.

Time was when extras were regarded as apprentice actors. From the extra ranks came such great stars as Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Janet Gaynor, Joan Crawford, Carole Lombard, Gary Cooper, Harold Lloyd, Jean Harlow, Ramon Novarro, Rudolph Valentino, Loretta Young and Myrna Loy. If mining the extra ranks paid dividends then, it should pay dividends now. And surely it would not be a bad idea to give a few likely extras bits in every picture produced—if one out of a hundred developed into a star, the producer would be making a killing.

Luli Deste Declares Self After Long 'Rubber' With John Boles.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 2.—John Boles climbed onto a silken bed and stayed there for hours today while one of the prettiest girls in Hollywood, and a baroness to boot, rubbed his back, and rubbed, and rubbed—and rubbed. Ummmm!

Boles got paid for it, too, but that was the fault of Columbia Pictures. The studio should have sent him a bill, and a big one, after the way he prolonged the ecstatic performance.

The scene was in the picture, "I Married an Artist." Boles, the artist, was supposed to be married to Luli Deste, the baroness turned actress, and she was about to leave him after a quarrel. So Boles pleaded a bad cold and a stiff back as she walked out the door, and asked her, please, would she give him an alcohol rub?

The proceedings started at 9 a. m., when Director Marion Gering shifted the camera around for the back-rubbing scene and had Boles climb onto the taffeta-spread bed. Then he called for Luli, who is blue-eyed and brown-haired and has the coolest fingers you ever felt. (We felt 'em.)

Purred Like a Cat.

She pulled his undershirt up around his shoulders, sprinkled alcohol on her fingers and started gently to rub the Bolesian back. A pleasurable tingle rippled up his spine and he purred, like a cat. This noise was not in the script, but Director Gering, who looked envious, didn't mind. It made the scene seem more natural.

During this back-rubbing, Boles and his make-believe wife were talking about their domestic affairs. Time after time Boles blew up in his lines, then sprawled back for more of Luli's ministrations. He moved his head out of the camera's vision. He shifted his arms when he shouldn't have. And each time he got his back rubbed once more. At lunch hour Luli still was working; Boles still was enjoying such prolonged and such tender back-scratching as no man ever has received before.

After lunch he returned for some more of the same and it was at this point that we left, unable longer to endure the sight of those white fingers on Boles' back—and the smug smile on his lips, the lucky guy!

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 2.

ENTERPRISE—A few Sundays ago James Ullman told the public, via a signed story in the drama section of the New York Times, that he was all washed up with the American Theater. Mr. Ullman, who had four flops last season, stated that perhaps it was all the fault of the critics, that for him the theater was a hopeless venture, and that it was impossible to make a living at it . . . He was very frank in writing his theatrical obituary. He was through, definitely through . . . Within the next ten days, however, the WPA will announce that James Ullman has accepted one of the most important administrative positions in the Federal Theater!

• • • •

TURMOIL—Mrs. I. Arnold Ross is in Reno now for the purpose of divorcing her husband . . . Mr. Ross was the New York legislator who four years ago sponsored the divorce reform bill.

• • • •

ANGER—Joe Louis went to Newark Airport after his victory over Tommy Farr, to take the 2 a. m. plane to Detroit. For some reason that wasn't explained to him, the plane didn't leave the airport at the scheduled hour but was delayed for a long time . . . Louis raged at this delay which was keeping him from his family. He never learned that the plane was held—so that it could transport to Detroit the A. P. picture of the fight.

• • • •

CRIME—Jay C. Flippen, driving from Jamaica, was stopped by a cop for driving past a red light, near the bridge. Flippen showed his license and the cop asked: "Are you Flippen, the radio actor?" . . . Jay nodded and the policeman directed: "Turn your car around, and follow me" . . . Flippen followed him, right back to Jamaica and to the Traffic Court there—where he was fined $1 . . . "Why didn't you just give me a ticket?" he asked the cop . . . "Because," was the reply, "you actors can squash tickets!"

• • • •

DEFEAT—The idea for Shep Field's "Rippling Rhythm" was furnished for him by Mrs. Fields. She also was responsible for the name "Rippling Rhythm" . . . For a number of weeks now Mrs. Fields has participated in Shep's radio broadcast, as part of the sketches. Now, however, she's been canceled because, the scriptists insist, she just doesn't fit into the broadcast scheme.

BEAUTY—The other day a bathing beauty contest was held near Bridgeport, Conn., to select the young lady who will represent the State of Connecticut in the forthcoming Atlantic City Beauty Pageant. Onlookers were shocked at the brevity of the costumes, and all the judges—except one—eyed every entry most intently . . . The lone judge who tried to show no interest in the almost nude ladies was Commissioner Paul Moss—who took the Strip out of Burlesque's strip-tease.

CHATTER—Alfred E. Smith will make his first speech on national politics, since the election, at Princeton, on September 17, Constitution Day. His broadcast will precede that of President Roosevelt . . . Life will feature a four-page spread of photos taken of a week-end at the George S. Kaufmans . . . The mounted police, who usually rush to the defense of their own, are adamant in their refusal to aid Patrolman Chalmers, who confessed to the Harlem speedway slaying . . . When the March of Time debuts this fall, it will be half an hour long, instead of 15 minutes . . . Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's sponsor for his new radio series starting next month will be—of all people—the Bromo Quinine Co.!

FAME—Gertrude Michael, the screen star, ringsiding at the Onyx Club Sunday night . . . A young lady who was dancing stopped in front of her table and asked: "Aren't you Gertrude Michael, the movie star?" . . . Miss Michael shook her head and replied: "So many people make the same mistake." Twice more the young lady persisted, and each time Miss Michael denied her identity . . . Just as she was leaving, the screen star turned to the fan and confessed the truth, "G'wan," the fan returned. "I KNOW you're not Gertrude Michael."

KNOWLEDGE—The newspaper editorials have commented upon Jeremiah T. Mahoney's addressing an audience in Yiddish last week. But they failed to explain Mahoney's knowledge of that language . . . In the early days of his law practice, he and Senator Bob Wagner were partners. Their first group of clients were from the East Side . . . "We're doing good business with these people," Wagner suggested, "so we might as well learn to speak their language" . . . And so Mahoney & Wagner went to City College—to learn to speak Yiddish.

Gilbert Miller Lays His Plans For the New Theatrical Season

International Producer Will Introduce New Plays and Players to the American Theater and Offer Two New Works in London.

New York, Sept. 2.—On Gilbert Miller's arrival last week from London, where he spent a busy summer putting on three plays ("Victoria Regina," "Old Music" and "Yes, My Darling Daughter"), he announced plans for the new season indicating that he will, as usual, provide a large amount of theatrical entertainment for playgoers in America and in England.

First on his list of productions in New York this fall will be the London comedy success, "French Without Tears," by Terence Rattigan, in which the young and handsome Frank Lawton, who was the adult movie David Copperfield, will be the leading man and in which two new and beautiful foreign actresses will be presented to New Yorkers for the first time.

French and English Beauties.

One of these is Jacqueline Porel, a French actress, who has been playing the same role she will play here in a French production of the play in Paris. Another claim to attention of Mlle. Porel is that she is a granddaughter of the famous Rejane, who was Bernhardt's predecessor as the most notable actress on the French stage of her time.

The second new young actress to be seen here in "French Without Tears" is Penelope Dudley Ward, who has been acting all this summer in Mr. Miller's London production of "Victoria Regina" in the role of Lady Jane.

New Lonsdale Comedy.

Mr. Miller plans, some time after "French Without Tears" has opened at Henry Miller's Theater on September 28, to present a new Frederick Lonsdale comedy, called "Half a Loaf," and the Keith Winter play, "Old Music."

In London he is to produce two new plays this season as well.

In addition to these activities, Mr. Miller is sponsoring three touring companies this fall which will bring to the leading cities of the United States and Canada preesntations of his last season's New York successes: Helen Hays will lead a company of "Victoria Regina" on a Coast-to Coast journey; Marta Abba will lead one company of "Tovarich" forth, and Eugenie Leontovich will lead forth another company.

Although not billed, one of vaudeville's favorite singers is appearing on the Earle stage this week, beginning today. Owing to the illness of the tenor soloist with The Legionnaires, Lester Cole is flying to Washington to appear in the first stage show today, and throughout the remainder of the week, in his place. Cole is well known in the Capital, having appeared here with his Midshipmen and other male singing groups. The Legionnaires, which he recently organized and trained, were to appear without him, until the soloist's illness made it essential that he join the troupe for this engagement. So now you know.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York Sept. 2.

FEW INDEED are the women who can dominate a crowd and quiet a rackety room when they arise on their hind legs and emit a speech. I can think of Dorothy Thompson and I can think twice of Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode, former diplomatess and now the wife of the handsome Danish captain of the King's guard.

ALICE HUGHES.

This was brought home to me again at the joint birthday party the other night for those two dear old octogenarians, Dan Frohman and August Heckscher, at Billey the Oysterman's famous eating house. Hostess Fannie Hurst had given each guest a little brass bell to ring when he or she felt a brief tribute coming on. The party table was merely screened off from the rest of the tavern, which is as noisy as are all joints devoted to the demolition of elegant, hearty food and drink. The rattle and chatter even drowned out little Mayor LaGuardia, who has been known to out-talk an elevated railway train. Then the spellbinding Mrs. Rhode stood up, looking every inch a queen, her natural beauty adorned with a royal purple crepe-silk gown.

• • • •

Don't tell me you can't inherit the larynx of an orator-father! In two minutes, the other diners had laid down their noisy forks, hushed their mouths and were listening to the magic voice of the daughter of William Jennings Bryan. It wasn't what she said, but how she said it, and she performed as compellingly on that group of 100 people as her silver-tongued Dad did on a crowded Chicago convention hall in '96. Add those sonorous tones to her handsome presence and you have a handful of power. By all means, friends, get Mrs. R. on your side if you want to run for anything. You'll be a nudge-in!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—When you see magic-mite Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina" this year, you'll surely hear an authentic German accent from her prince consort, Albert! He has just arrived in town, a good-looking German and screen actor named Warner Bateman. Incidentally, he was born in Guatemala on a fruit plantation . . . Vincent Price, who had the part on Broadway, is rehearsing the male lead in a new comedy "Joan," which is to star Elissa Landi, of the films, and is now in rehearsal.

Our town is proud of its progress in demolishing the ghastly old tenement houses which are horrible fire-traps and date back to the day after the Flood. Commissioner Langdon Post reports that 7,000 of these municipal disgraces have been knocked to pieces in three years—a grand record. Alas, there are still 60,000 of these monstrosities cursing the metropolis. They're awful holes; disease breeders, and when they burn, everybody burns with 'em. . . .

• • • •

Bracelets are moving north on the arm. At least I saw Connie de Pinna, one of our clever dress designers, wearing a large gold armband above the elbow . . . Speaking of gee-gaws, Regina Crewe, one of our movie-reviewers, has a most marvelous crystal ring, carved by Lalique of Paris. It has a gorgeous blue-white center which makes it more exciting than any diamond weighing less than a half-pound . . .

Ernest Hemingway's first full length novel is set to appear October 18. It is called "To Have and Have Not," and is the story of a Kew West boatman, surrounded by writers, yachtsmen and all those with time and desire to battle giant game fish in Florida waters. Hope He-Man Ernest hasn't lost the old touch, eh? . . .

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I KNOW I'm lucky," Helen R. replied when we admired her pretty house, "and don't think I'm not grateful."

Her home couldn't help but reflect this rightside-upness that you feel when you meet Helen. It's so pleasantly complete, so deeply comfortable. There's nothing overwhelmingly dramatic about it . . . if there were it wouldn't be so livable. But it has a quiet dignity, an enveloping atmosphere of contentment and happiness lingering about it.

Remembering back to an overnight visit there recently we think first of the carpeted entrance hall and staircase. A deep tufted broadloom in mulberry gave a welcoming luxuriousness to the first impression we had of the house.

Then there was the big window at the bend in the stairs. Instead of the usual little window, there was one that began almost at the landing floor and reached far and wide up the high wall of the stair well—usually an awkward space. This gave a very attractive openness and spaciousness to the staircase and made it seem much more imposing than it would have otherwise looked.

The dining room, serene with walnut furniture and accented with the gleam of silver and crystal, had a wide window overlooking the back garden abloom with delphinium and hollyhocks and petunias. And a cold supper of homemade tomato juice, jellied fruit salad, sliced spiced ham, pecan buns just out of the oven and iced mint tea certainly hit the spot on that hot summer evening.

Gay and Slim Woolens, Chic Harbingers of Fall

HERE ARE TWO woolen frocks, smart enough to grace the wardrobe of the most fastidious business woman or college girl. The materials are interesting and the styling includes the latest ideas in chic effect. Both are equipped with talon fastenings to insure a slim and smooth silhouette. The light frock with dark accessories (left) features a flattering new neckline and slightly broadened shoulders. The striped model (below) makes use of novel manipulation of the material, which is brown ground with beige stripes.

Fall Collections of Frocks Show Many Smart Woolens

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

BRIGHT WOOLENS are synonymous with the first thoughts of fall. College girls are now buying sheer wools and colorful tweeds to take back to school and business women are wishing it would suddenly turn cold so they could wear them immediately. All of which is a grand tribute to the ultra-smart wools in the fall and winter collections. Another thing which makes woolens doubly important this year is the unprecedented popularity of the short, chunky fur coat, fur jackets and gay woolen frocks being perfect affinities.

Fall woolens are interesting from two viewpoints—the lovely new materials and the chic styling. Color, too, plays an exciting role in this gay wool drama, and the unique combining of color tones which heretofore have not been thought of as especially harmonious. The new tweeds are soft and delightful of texture; chiffon sheers are news in the realm of woolen fabrics; suede broadcloth is an effective smooth-surfaced wool which is particularly adaptable to jacket-frocks. Woolen lace in geometrical and odd flower patterns, fashions both tailored and more feminine frocks; rabbit hair voile is a grand new wool, especially good for draped styling. Besides the gay and unusual tweed mixtures, stripes are a new slant—white and light-colored stripes on dark grounds. Clan plaids abound in woolen materials of every weight and texture.

One and two-piece costumes share honors about equally in the latest wool stylings. The silhouette may be slim, flared in a modified manner, or with the all-round pleated skirt which is gaining impetus in the sports type of woolens. Necklines are round, square, V-shaped, or finished with tiny collars. Sleeves may be short (above the elbow), the new bracelet length (just below the elbow), or long and fitted. Skirt lengths range from 12 to 15 inches; the shorter length is the newer, but the choice should depend upon the individual. One-piece frocks with waist or hip-length jackets in matching or contrasting color, and well-fitted to the figure, are outstanding in the fall woolen picture.

In the nubby woolens, some of the new color tones are antique mahogany, tile rose, hockey green, placid blue, burnt sugar, sandy-beige, caramel brown and sun-valley gold. In the heavier mixtures, all of the popular and high-fashion colors are effectively combined. Black, brown, gray, navy and natural are included in the wool style picture this season, and are considered extremely chic. There are such color combinations as pine, green and bright blue, brown and navy, royal purple and bright blue, rose and taupe and black with brilliant color tones.

Laura has a better job and nicer friends, Janet thinks resentfully, because Laura went to college and she didn't.

But such a difference exists only if you let it! Don't think for a minute that if you miss college you miss something for which there's no substitute!

By studying at home a little while each day, by making intelligent use of radio, movies, newspapers, you can be as cultured as any college graduate.

Perhaps you feel stupid with educated people because they talk about persons you never heard of. Be an information sleuth. Keep a "Who's Who" notebook.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Diphtheria Prevention.

Diphtheria is the one disease where prevention depends upon the personal effort of the individual.

Typhoid fever has disappeared largely because of control of the drinking water supply. When you go out and get a vaccination against typhoid you are simply taking an extra precaution; yo uare making things a little safer for your self. The main guardian against typhoid fever is the cleanliness of the water supply.

With smallpox individual vaccination is more important, but still efficient quarantine, quick reporting of sporadic cases and prompt segregation with vaccination of contacts plays a role, certainly an important role, in the present rarity of smallpox on this earth.

With diphtheria there is no possibility of central control. This is because many perfectly healthy people go around with diphtheria germs in their mouths and throats. It was with diphtheria that the importance of carriers was first recognized. Graham Smith found that 66 per cent of the members of a family where there had been a case of diphtheria harbored the germs. In families where precautions were taken to isolate the sick room, only 10 per cent were carriers. In infected schools 8.7 per cent of the healthy pupils were found to be carriers.

Many Naturaly Immune.

If it is asked why this does not turn into a universal epidemic of diphtheria, the answer is that the mechanisms are several. Most important is that a large proportion of the population under any circumstances, over the age of 15 are naturaly immune to diphtheria. (By "under any circumstances" I mean natural condition, when deliberate individual vaccination is not carried out.)

Then it has been shown that the saliva has an inhibitory action on germs, changing a virulent type of diphtheria to a nonvirulent type in a short time, so that the carrier, by the action of his own secretions becomes less dangerous.

Even so, in a state of nature, it is difficult to overemphasize how a small focus of diphtheria can be widely spread. Chapin has given a graphic description of it—in fact too graphic to repeat in whole. The secretion of the mouth is used for a variety of purposes, and numberless articles are for one reason or another placed in the mouth, and the fingers are with great frequency raised to the mouth or nose.

If indigo were secreted in the mouth and nose, the fingers would continuously be stained a deep blue. All successful commerce is reciprocal, and in this universal trade the fingers bring foreign secretions to the mouth of the owner, and there exchanging for its own, distribute the latter to everything that the hand touches. Everyone is busily engaged in the distribution of saliva, so that the end of each day finds this secretion on doors, windowsills, furniture, playthings, in the home, straps of trolley cars, rails, counters, desks.

Unpleasant as this picture is, it is a fact of life and one that we can take advantage of to punch home the necessity for diphtheria immunization.

Tailored Handbags Are Shown in Paris

Paris (U.P.).—Tailored handbags, as trim as the dark autumn street clothes with which they will be carried, are making their bow in Paris shops. Alligator is the newest of materials for the coming season, but rich calfskins have adopted a note of novelty which will mark them as being definitely autumn, 1937.

Alligator bags are seen principally in simple, rectangular designs with no trim other than an occasional tailored gold buckle. Calfskins, on the other hand, have discarded the severity of line and vary in style considerably.

Handles are buckled down like suitcase straps, dull gold links hold other in place, and strapless bags are trimmed with simple rolls of matching leather or are topped with metal frames of modern design.

Pouches are back in soft dull leather broader at the base than at the top. Fashioned with round or rectangular caps that fit over the opening of the bag, when it is opened the sides may be spread out so that the contents may be found easily

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Wives Who Have "Regrets" Warn J. F. D. Not to Weaken and Let Her Foot Slip Before Marriage.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: Out of bitter personal experience, two wives reply today to the question raised by J. F. D., August 27, in this column as to whether or not the old standards of morality for women are "poppycock." In her letter, J. F. D., a 22-year-old teacher in a private school in Washington, said that she had observed that the girls who "ran wild" made the best marriages, while those who clung to their moral standards were left at home waiting. The conductor of this column asked for comment from husbands and wives. From the vast amount of mail received, there are here published two letters directed particularly at J. F. D.'s question: "What is the satisfaction of knowing I'm still a virgin?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with apprehension that line of J. F. D.'s letter in which she said, "I've lived according to the standards my parents handed down to me—so far." I doubt if anyone is better qualified to testify to the need of continued adherence to those standards than myself. Is not 22 rather young to have despaired of securing a husband? I was 30 when I married and I drew the pick of the lot. I would not trade my husband for the husband of any one of my many friends who married in their early 20's.

• • • •

Let me give "The Case for Chastity." At heart, I sincerely believe I am good and always have been. But somewhere something was missing, probably strength of character. I should never have considered "petting" as a method of securing dates. I always had a host of girl friends and enjoyed being alone and dates were not all-important.

• • • •

Still for some reason when I was very young I submitted to the advances of a young man. He wanted to marry me and I suppose so far as he was able, he loved me. But I refused. Years later I met and married my husband. I did not tell him of my experience, nor shall I ever tell him. I think that the least I can do to repay him for his affection and goodness to me is to spare him that knowledge. He fairly worships me and I am convinced that nothing could separate us, but I know that the disclosure would cause him pain.

• • • •

But do you think I ever forget it? I had shoved it in the back of my mind until my marriage. Now, each act of love and kindness on the part of my husband makes me realize how unworthy I am of that trust and affection. And a long life stretches ahead in which to remember.

• • • •

Please, J. F. D., do not scoff at "the satisfaction of knowing I'm still a virgin." There s no substitute for that satisfaction. It is the basis of complete happiness in the marriage relation. And is it your desire to get married, or do you aspire higher and desire to stay married and bring to some man the happiness that only comes from a harmonious married life?

• • • •

Look elsewhere for the cause of your unpopularity, for I assure you it isn't the standards of morality to which you have adhered. B. P.

Haunted by Memory.

• • • •

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The dictionary defines "fool" as one lacking intelligence." That's a name that could easily be applied to me and to J. F. D. Or maybe I should say we do not lack intelligence but lack of ability to apply it. J. F. D. is only 22 years old. I'm some years her senior. I was several years older than she is when I had the same distorted ideas. Now they do not seem ridiculous. Rather they are pathetic.

• • • •

Margaret Culkin Banning's "The Case for Chastity" was a splendid article. Would that I could have read it some years ago. Maybe my life would have been happier, free of doubts and worry.

• • • •

Before I was married I saw girls around me who forgot virtue, but I could never understand how it was possible to do so. Then I fell in love. After some months of companionship, because the man "could not wait," I gave in. It was the fear of losing him and I loved him so much that if he had said for me to stick my head in the fire I would have done so. Fortunately the man loved me a great deal. We were married a few months after the thing happened. We did not marry because of what had happened, but because we loved each other.

• • • •

My husband is unreasonably jealous, even of my girl friends. So jealous that I do not dance because it has caused too many quarrels. Because I gave way to him, there is always the thought in the back of his mind that what happened once may easily happen again. We are happy in a certain way, but I feel that if I had had more control over my love, and we had gone along as I had always dreamed an engagement should be, we would be so much happier.

• • • •

At the most unusual times what I did comes into my mind. One time I felt I had to talk about it. An opportunity came and my husband and I discussed it. He seemed to think that what happened was my fault. How that hurt! I was furious. For the moment I hated him. But then, wasn't it really my fault? That is what makes the thing so horrible. It is something that haunts me all the time.

• • • •

We have no children. I am afraid to have any. It may seem a bit silly, but I was reared in an easy-going family. We were not over-religious, but were taught that certain things were sinful and that some time God would punish us. It might not be right away. It might be days, months or even years, but a sin was a sin. The greatest punishment would be to have a child and that child not be normal, mentally or physically. The knowledge of disregarding Mrs. Grundy is bad enough, but the other thought is even worse. All of this torment is the result of one hasty moment. Is it worth it? No. I'd rather have "Miss" put on my tombstone any day than to live over again what I have been through.

• • • •

I wish I had J. F. D.'s chance. Oh, to start again clean and fresh. Maybe I'm morbid about the whole thing. I try to forget but I may go for weeks and never think of it, then something will bring it to mind, such as a picture of an adorable baby or a boy and girl having a church wedding.

• • • •

Let J. F. D. read "Bystander," a short story by Mary Hastings Bradley in the Pictorial-Review-Delineator for July, 1937. Let J. F. D. ask herself this question: "What would I want My daughter to do?

REGRETFUL.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post's woman page.

Tomorrow's Letters.

Happy wives will reply tomorrow in this column to J. F. D.'s question raised in her letter of August 27 as to whether the old ideals of morality and chastity still worked. "If they do," she asked, "where are the shining examples? How many husbands and wives are true to the persons they marry?" Comment from happily married couples was requested. From a deluge of replies, some representative letters have been selected for publication.

Picnic Is Mandatory for Labor Day; Roast Ham Suitable Dish for Holiday

Outings Monday Mark Close of Summer Activities.

By Jean Green.

A PLANNED OUTING and a well-filled picnic basket are solving the question of what to do on Labor Day in many homes. This custom of having a picnic has been established by none other than the First Family. President and Mrs. Roosevelt will have their annual picnic at their Hyde Park estate Monday.

JEAN GREEN.

Such outings are really glorious, and as the week-end marks the official close of the summer season, it is a natural "must" for festive activities.

In marketing, not only must the picnic menu be kept in mind, but other meals for the week-end planned so they can be adapted to any last-minute change in plans.

A sensible piece de resistance for Sunday is roast veal or ham. This can be used in chafing-dish combinations for the buffet party or sliced for sandwiches.

These menus may offer suggestions for your week-end parties:

Picnic

Sliced meat sandwiches on pumpernickel
Dill pickels
Potato salad in green pepper cups
Sliced peaches
Stuffed hard-cooked eggs
Assorted fresh fruits
Chocolate loaf cake with fudge icing
Coffee in thermos

Buffet Party.

Assorted hors d'oeuvres
Veal salad bowl garnished with coated almonds
Sliced fresh tomatoes
Butter
Green gage plum preserves
Meringues with whipped cream, fresh peach filling
Iced coffee

Chocolate cake is a practical dessert for Labor Day. The manner of serving will determine whether it should be baked as a loaf or a layer cake. For the picnic, the loaf cake topped with fudge frosting has the advantage of being more easily transported. The cake can be left in the pan in which it has been baked and served directly from the pan.

For a more festive occasion, bake the cake in layers and put it together with a rich filling of raisins and nuts and cover with thick fluffy white frosting. Here is a recipe:

Chocolate Cake.

2 cups of sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons of baking powder
¼ teaspoon of salt
2-3 cup of butter
1½ cups of sugar
3 eggs
3 squares of unsweetened chocolate
¾ cup of milk
1 teaspoon of vanilla

Measure sifted flour, add baking powder, salt and sift three times. Cream and butter until light and fluffy. Add the sugar gradually and cream until well blended. Add the eggs and beat well. Melt the chocolate over hot water and add. Add the flour alternately with the milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition of flour. Add the vanilla.

Bake in two greased layer pans in an oven set at 350 degrees. The baking time is 30 minutes.

Filling.

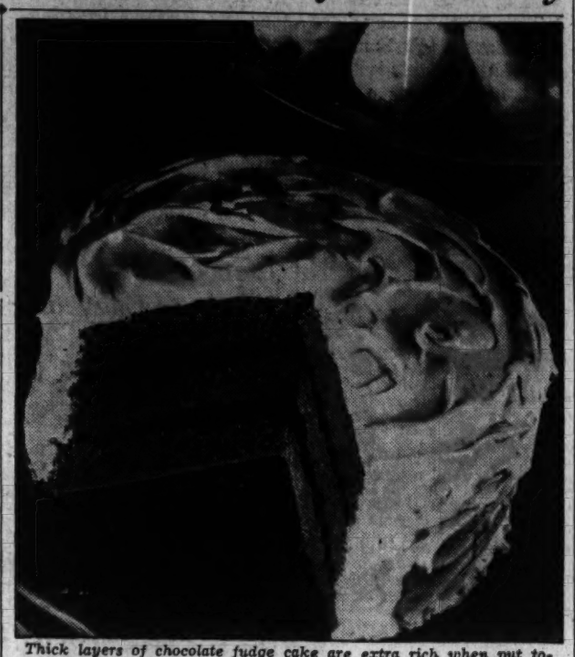
¾ cup of brown sugar
2 tablespoons of butter
¼ cup of water
¾ cup of chopped walnut meats
¾ cup of chopped raisins
2 tablespoons of cream

Heat the sugar, butter and water in a skillet and cook until a small amount forms a soft ball in cold water (235 degrees). Remove from the fire, add nuts and raisins. Add the cream.

Frosting.

2 egg whites
1½ cups of sugar
3 tablespoons of water
1½ teaspoons of light corn sirup
1 teaspoon of vanilla

Combine the unbeaten egg whites, add the sugar, water and corn sirup and cook in the top part of the double boiler, beating constantly with the egg beater. Place over rapidly boiling water, beating constantly and heat for seven minutes. The frosting should stand in peaks. Remove from the boiling water. Add the vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread well.



Thick layers of chocolate fudge cake are extra rich when put together with rich raisin and nut filling and topped with thick fluffy frosting. Serve it for your dinner or buffet party with fresh peach ice cream.

Clothes Tastes Of School Girls Are on Incline

HIGH SCHOOL girls are showing better taste and a greater sense of style values in their clothes, according to Miss Crete Dahl, editor of Infants' and Children's Review.

Up to within the last two years, high school girls, Miss Dahl points out, went in for fads and for haphazard costumes, frequently copying in a sloppy way the styles of their older sisters at college. However, this year's high school girl, she predicts, will look as smart and well groomed as the well-dressed women anywhere, due to an awakening style sense in the teen-age group. The following changes will be evident:

Clothes will still be practical and keep their shape with moderate care. The silhouette will be visible. Skirts will be shorter. Costumes will be varied by a selection of blouses, sweaters, hats, scarfs and appropriate accessories.

Well-rounded wardrobes for high school girls are taking the place of the unoriginal skirt and sweater uniforms of other years, according to Miss Dahl. She lists the following wardrobe as required by the well-dressed schoolgirl:

Tweed suit and coat.

Daytime frocks of wool, shantung or rayon.

Sunday-best silks (or synthetics) to be used also for class parties.

Formal party frocks which turn the drabbest cocoon into a graceful, beautiful butterfly. Even girls of 8 or 10 are demanding and getting ankle-length party fashions. These dresses aren't always practical. Styles change. Sizes are outgrown. Endurance isn't asked. Only a lovely transformation is desired.

New Recipe Used For Fragrant Stew

Spices Invigorate Dish Cooked in Casserole.

A fragrant beef stew, such as the one in the recipe below, is bound to bring smiling faces to the table, for its rich aroma will advertise its deliciousness even before it is tasted. A meat-pie may be made of this recipe by transferring the stew to a casserole when it is cooked tender, and covering with either a pie or biscuit crust. Bake in a fairly hot oven until the crust is done.

Spiced Beef Stew.

2 pounds lean beef
8 small onions
8 small potatoes
4 carrots
3 slices bacon
2 tablespoons whole mixed spices.

Crisp the bacon in the bottom of a stewing pan and sear the beef in the fat. When beef is richly browned add 2 quarts of hot water, salt to taste, and the spices tied in a bag. Cook 15 minutes, then remove spices. Cook another hour, then add the vegetables and continue cooking until all ingredients are tender. Thicken the gravy with a little flour moistened with cold water. Serve with a green salad.

Add Sugar to Ham.

To add to the flavor when cooking a slice of ham cover the top of the ham with apricots, peaches or pineapple and sprinkle them generously with dark brown sugar.

Sesame Seeds Used In Cookie Recipe

Tea Snacks in Oriental Manner Described.

SOME DAY when you are in an exotic mood, but have a cookie baking job on your hands, combine the mood and the job. The result will be refreshments in the Ali Baba manner.

Sesame Seed Cookies.

¾ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons shortening
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons milk
1 egg
1 cup roasted sesame seed
1 cup seedless raisins

Sift together all the dry ingredients except the sugar. Add to this mixture all the other ingredients and stir until the mass is well mixed. Drop dough on a greased cookie sheet using about 1 teaspoon of dough for each cookie and spacing about 2 inches apart. Bake in a moderately hot oven until lightly browned.

To roast sesame seed, wash them first, then spread them out and allow them to dry at room temperature. When dry, spread them about one-fourth inch deep in a pan and roast them in the oven for 25 minutes, stirring frequently. The oven temperature should be low.

Saving Furniture.

Glue pieces of felt to the bottoms of candlesticks, vases and other ornaments likely to scratch finished wooden surfaces. (Discarded hats are excellent for a felt supply.) Mending glue or cement will prove sufficiently adhesive.

Greek Minister Here Receives Decoration

Demetrios Sicilianos Becomes One of Four Living Persons Entitled to Wear Grand Cross of Commander.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Latest among the diplomats to be honored by their sovereigns is the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, who has just been awarded the Grand Cross of Commander by King George II of Greece.

Receiving the decoration for diplomatic services rendered to his country both here and in a number of European posts, the Minister is now one of the four living persons privileged to wear the coveted cross. News of the award awaited the Minister upon his return from Syracuse, N. Y., where he attended the recent convention of the Ahepa organization. Ahepa—in case you don't know—is the American Hellenic Educational Progressive Association, in which many forward-seeing persons both here and in Europe are actively interested.

Is Active in Making Friends for Greece

When there is any sort of meeting at which American and Greek relationships may be strengthened, the Minister is sure to be present. One of the most active members of the Capital's Diplomatic Corps, he is here, there, and everywhere to perform the duties of his office, to become better acquainted with his people in this country, and to make American friends for Greece.

In the two years he has served in the United States he has personally opened many Greek exhibits of fine arts in New York, has attended countless functions sponsored by Greek societies throughout the East, and has been an active member of the Greek Orthodox Church here. Furthermore, he has won his way into Washington's social life, and is in great demand for the smartest social gatherings. An authority on post-Byzantine painting, a linguist and a bachelor, Mr. Sicilianos is also a collector of objects d'art and an El Greco enthusiast. During the winter he frequently lectures in New York on El Greco's work. During the summer he divides his time between the Capital and various sporting spots and resorts. At the climax of the racing season, he was in Saratoga. Tomorrow he will be off to Hot Springs to spend several days.

Gunthers to Return to Capital Today

Back to the Capital today will come the recently appointed Minister to Rumania, Franklin Mott Gunther and Mrs. Gunther, who have spent most of the summer abroad. They arrived in New York yesterday on the Rex and are expected in Washington this morning. Chances are, however, they won't stay long in their attractive Georgetown house—where Admiral Decatur's widow once lived—but will be off soon for Bucharest.

After almost seven years out of the diplomatic game, Mr. Gunther probably feels his return to it is something of a "homecoming." A career diplomat for 22 years, he was the American Minister to Egypt when he resigned from service in 1930. Since then he has devoted most of his time to art and writing.

At almost the same time Mr. Gunther's appointment was publicized, his brother-in-law, Ray Atherton, formerly Counselor of the American Embassy in London, was named Minister to Bulgaria. Mrs. Gunther and Mrs. Atherton were the Misses Hunnewell, of Massachusetts before their marriages. Another sister, Mrs. John Lawrence, lives in Boston, but visits here frequently. Her son, Amory Lawrence, also has spent much time in the Capital.

Vitettis Arrive on the Rex

Any mention of County and Countess Leonardo Vitetti generally revives the rumor that they are slated for the Italian Embassy here. They arrived in New York yesterday on the same ship as the Gunthers, but judging from their plans it doesn't look as if they have any idea of settling down here any time soon.

This is their first visit to the United States since they were married three years ago at Oyster Bay, Long Island. The Countess came to be in the bridal party at the marriage of Miss Lucile Theriot and Elisha Walker on September 14. She expects to start back to Italy early in October, but Count Vitetti will probably return sooner.

Sporting Events Draw Social Lights

Sporting events to which society with a capital "S" is turning its attention include the national single tennis championships now under way in Forest Hills, Long Island. The recent victory of the American Davis Cup team has been "the needle, Watson" to tennis, and provisions have been made for a larger crowd than usual this year. Among the social notables who have subscribed for stadium seats for the final matches are John Hay Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, and Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor—to name only a few.

After the tennis championships will come still other events to draw sporting society from New York, the Capital and other Eastern cities. The national open polo championships, the Meadowbrook Hunt and the races at Belmont Park are also scheduled to begin this month.

Pan-American Union Closes Concert Season in Gardens

The romantic Aztec gardens of the Pan American Union were the scene of the final concert of the summer season there last evening, when the Argentine barytone, Mario Silveira, was guest artist. The instrumental portion of the program was played by the United States Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Taylor Branson.

In the absence of the director general of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, who is convalescing, the guests were greeted by the assistant director, Dr. Pedro de Alba.

Although many diplomats and officials are still out of the city, the Diplomatic Corps was represented by the Ambassador of Ecuador and Mme. Alfaro, the Minister of Latvia, Dr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Minister of Paraguay and Mme. Busk Dodas; the Minister of Panama and Mme. Boyd; the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Vladimir Hurban; the Minister of Nicaragua and Mme. Brenes Jarquin, the Charge d'Affaires of Argentina and Mme. Ghiraldo, the Charge d'Affaires of Honduras and Mme. Caceras, the Charge d'Affaires of Portugal, Joao de Deus Ramos, and Charge d'Affaires of Sweden, Mr. Folke Wennerberg.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper were among the guests, as were also a number of the Little Cabinet.

The Army and Navy also were well represented.

Engaged to Lieut. Oldfield; Niece of Mrs. Bangs, of Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Linwood Chapman, of Smithfield, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Carter, to Lieut. John Sherman Oldfield, U. S. Marine Corps, son of Judge and Mrs. Edward Dewes Oldfield, of Oklahoma City.

The bride-to-be attended schools in Florida and Washington and is the niece of Mrs. H. Clifford Bangs, of this city.

The wedding will take place in December.

Rev and Mrs. Wolven Return From Vacation

The Rev. and Mrs. Raymond L. Wolven, son-in-law and daughter of the Bishop of Washington, the Rev. James E. Freeman and Mrs. Freeman, have returned to Washington and opened their home in Wesley Heights after having spent most of the summer in England and Scotland.

Bishop and Mrs. Freeman, who have been vacationing at their home in Soorento, Me., will return next week.

Returns to New York.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

ABOUT THE TOWN

With Dudley Harmon

Going into a smart restaurant this week is like visiting Bailey's Beach the day after Labor Day, for the chic eating places have reached an all-summer low as far as the presence of social lights is concerned.

Yet a month—or even a week—from now the Carlton dining room will have recaptured its usual masculine air, as State Department officials or perhaps John L. Lewis talk over vital affairs with their cronies; the Mayflower will once again be its usual gay and frivolous-seeming self with dashing diplomats and beautifully dressed women; and the headwaiter at the Occidental will be yearning harder than anyone else in Washington for the Congressman's return. Every smart dining place in the Capital has its own atmosphere and clientele and we plan to describe in this column from time to time what gives some of them their particular cachet.

Beginning in a chronological way, one of the oldest is the Occidental, which will celebrate its twenty-fifth birthday in November. This is the place where visiting tourists love to crane their necks at autographed pictures of the Washington great from McKinley to the second Roosevelt—at every Capital celebrity, in fact, except actors and actresses, who for some reason, are not included in the famous gallery which lines the walls. Even a photo of the late Will Rogers, who, after all, was mayor of Beverly Hills and may be said to have achieved some prominence as a public figure, is relegated to the upstairs office of the proprietor.

Most of the these autographed pictures are insured for $500; some for even as much as $1,000. The small paintings of President Roosevelt, which hangs near the entrance, cost the patriotic restaurateur $800.

SENATOR TYDINGS peers rigidly over a stiff collar in a photograph taken some years ago, when he was a bachelor and used to frequent the Occidental far more than he does now. In fact, he lived there at one time. Further along the wall is the Prince of Wales, looking like a schoolboy, in a picture presented on his first trip to this country, and one of only two autographed pictures he parted from at the time. Harding's Cabinet has been shoved over to an obscure side of another wall, but the manager denies that subsequent discredit of some of its members is responsible for this. Celebrated world fliers and explorers, including Lindbergh and Admiral Byrd and Count von Luekner are hung in the older part of the restaurant, which originally consisted of a mere grill and bar. Even Buffalo Bill has his place in the company, looking rather strange in contrast to dignified statesmen.

• • • •

The Occidental isn't interested in securing autographed pictures of people who aren't interested in the Occidental. Most of the persons who stare down from its walls have dined there at least once, and some have even asked to be included in the gallery. Mme. Secretary Perkins, Ruth Nichols, of aviation fame, and former Representative Florence Kahn are among the few women whose photographs are included in the collection.

C.A.R. Urged To Memorize U.S. Anthem

Convention Delegates Must Know Three National Songs.

Societies Asked to Have One Program a Year Devoted to Music.

The Post Club Editor.

Young America hereafter will lead the singing of the country's National anthem and know all the words, if the Children of the American Revolution have anything to do with it. Mrs. Harold B. Gardner, national chairman of music for the society, has assigned the learning of "The Star-Spangled Banner," "America" and "America the Beautiful" as one of the year's tasks for the C. A. R. This will form a bond between the members throughout the Nation, she says, uniting them in one definite undertaking, and, when they gather next spring in Washington for the national convention, they will find satisfaction in the results of their efforts.

In a letter to State presidents of the C. A. R., Mrs. Gardner has asked them to appoint State music chairmen who, in turn, will request the senior presidents of individual societies to name junior chairmen. She suggests having one of the year's programs in each society devoted to music, and that the members come prepared to sing from memory all the verses of "America," three of "America The Beautiful" and at least two of "The Star-Spangled Banner." Most people can join in with assurance only on "long may it wave," she says of "The Star-Spangled Banner," so two verses well sung will be a distinct accomplishment for the young C. A. R.'s."

Offers Prizes For New Song

In addition to this, she has offered prizes for a new C. A. R. song, $10 for first prize; $5, second, and $3, third. The society already has two, "Children of Patriots" and "We Are Members of the C. A. R." She plans to have the prize-winning composition—both words and music by the contestant—selected in time to distribute a copy to each society before the national convention.

Another contest is for a parody version of "Yankee Doodle" which the youngsters can learn. Although the society's name is Children of the Revolution, it includes in its membership young people up to the age of 20, and these elder members are those from whom she expects the compositions to come. The "Yankee Doodle" competition also may interest the younger girls and boys.

Music Department New Activity

The music department is among the new ones started this year in the society by Mrs. William H. Pouch, national president. Besides the special features to interest all members, it also will suggest programs of American music which may be prepared for meetings of the different groups.

Mrs. Gardner, whom Mrs. Pouch has chosen as chairman, is a resident of New Rochelle, N. Y., where she organized the Col. Joseph Drake Society several years ago and served as its first senior president. She is a singer, and during the World War was in the entertainment service overseas. Her eldest son, Brooks Gardner, who will enter Princeton on the completion of his high school course, is an active member of the Col. Drake Society and has attended the C. A. R. convention here each spring for several seasons.

Mrs. Etta Grimm, of Oklahoma, is the guest of Mrs. Patrick O'Neill, of this city. Mrs. O'Neill entertained at a luncheon and bridge on Wednesday for her guests, who will remain here for some time.

MINNIE L. BRIGGS, an artist member of the District of Columbia branch of the League of American Pen Women, will step out of her usual role and become a radio speaker at 9:15 a. m. tomorrow in one of the series of broadcasts over WJSV, sponsored by the league. Miss Marguerite Merigold, president of the Washington branch, has been in charge of the monthly programs, started last February.

Miss Briggs, one of the few women etchers in this country, has been called "the poet etcher of Washington," for she is also a poet and has a story or verse for each of her etchings. She recently completed a new book of poems in which 50 etchings will be included.

She has exihibted at the National Museum, the Corcoran Gallery and elsewhere with the Painters, Sculptors and Gravers Society, the Water Color Club and the Society of Washington Etchers, of which she is organizer and vice president.

Her subject tomorrow will be "The City of Washington as an Inspiration for Creative Art." It is one on which she is well qualified to speak, for she is just completing a series of etchings of famous trees of the Capitol. Among them is one of the Washington elm, where Washington tied his horse and in whose shade he stood while superintending the building of the Capitol. Another is of the Treaty Oak, a great tree still standing on the old Deanwood estate at Forida and Connecticut avenues. Many treaties between the Indians and the white men were signed beneath it, and it was there that the Anacostan chief, Manacasset, kept Magdalena Noyes and her baby, Kwawa, whom he captured from the white settlers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 2.—Those galloping Giants pulled a full game in front of the National League pack today by outlasting the St. Louis Cardinals for a 5-4 ten-inning victory.

Given slugging help from an unexpected source when young Johnny McCarthy, usually a mild man at the plate, belted two homers, the Giants came from behind three times to win out.

Although thy clubbed Si Johnson and Bob Weiland, who broke into the game in the tenth, for 16 hits, while the Cards collected only eight from Harry Gumbert, Al Smith and Dick Coffman, poor fielding offset their clouting edge.

The Cards took a one-run lead in the first half of the tenth and appeared to have the game sewed up, but Mel Ott tied it up with his thirtieth homer, and then Hank Leiber, Harry Danning and Burgess Whitehead singled the winning run across.

The Cards not only lost the game, but their first baseman as well. One of Gumbert's slants felled Johnny Mize in the sixth and he was carried off the field on a stretcher. Although he was not believed seriously hurt, he was taken to a hospital for an X-ray examination.

McCarthy's bat struck the balance that saved the Giants from throwing the game away, through their four errors. After the Cards took the lead with a run in the second on one hit and two errors, McCarthy got them back in the ball game with his first homer with a mate on base in the sixth. A passed ball, a hit and two walks gave the Cards two in the eighth, but McCarthy promptly tied it up again with his second homer.

Dodgers Defeat Cubs by 4-3.

Brooklyn, Sept. 2.—The Dodgers kept the Chicago Cubs in second place in the National League pennant sweepstakes again today by outlasting their rivals for a 4-to-3 decision in 11 innings.

The defeat, coming while the league-leading Giants were defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, dropped the Cubs a full game in the runner-up slot.

The victory was the Dodgers' second straight over the Cubs and gave them their third straight series.

They had to come from behind a 3-1 advantage to do it, but they accomplished it with a two-run scoring splurge in the eighth, during which the collapsible Cub infield committed a costly error, and then won out in the second extra frame. Max Butcher, big Dodger pitcher, who took over the mound assignment in the tenth after Luke Hamlin and Jim Lindsey had given up, won his own game with a single that sent the winning run scampering across the plate.

Bill Lee went the route for the Cubs, and, after giving up a run in the first inning, did all right until Phil Cavaretta's error started the Dodgers on their two-run rally in the eighth. A double by Jimmy Bucher and a single by Buddy Hassett sent the two runs in, after Cavaretta gave Johnny Cooney a life on his fumble.

Feller Fans 12 Yankees; Tribe Wins

By the Associated Press.

The Cleveland youngster fanned a dozen members of the vaunted murderers' row, held them hitless until the fifth, blanked them until the eighth, and beat them, 4 to 2, with five hits.

Only Joe DiMaggio's thirty-ninth homer in the eighth, followed by consecutive doubles by Bill Dickey and George Selkirk, who played his first full game since July 2, saved the Yankees from a shutout.

The Indians sewed the game up by scoring three runs through the first six innings off Monte Pearson. Moose Solters gave them an unnecessary run with a homer off Ivy Paul Andrews in the eighth.

The victory was the Tribe's second straight over the Yanks, and marked the New Yorkers' fifth defeat against as many wins on the Western swing they ended today.

Feller got Lou Gehrig three times on strikes, Don Heffner, Pearson, and Frank Crosetti twice each, and Red Rolfe, Myril Hoag and Pinch-hitter Tom Henrich once each.

Athletics Beat St. Louis by 5-4.

St. Louis, Sept. 2 (AP).—Although outhit, 12 to 7, the Philadelphia Athletics retained their slim hold on seventh place in the American League race by defeating the Browns today, 5 to 3. A defeat for the A's would have pushed them back into the cellar.

Bill Werber doubled with the bases loaded in the fifth inning to drive in three runs to assure victory for the Athletics. Frank Hayes hit a home run off Jim Walkup in the second. The win gave the A's the series, three games to one.

Favorites Advance In National Tennis

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 2.—There was a great deal of firing today on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club as the men's and women's national singles championships got under their cumbersome way.

Twenty of the 48 seeded players in both divisions saw action this afternoon. When play ended only one, Ross Wilson, of Canada, had been eliminated.

Although Don Budge, the California redhead, who is the No. 1 domestic ranking man, will not swing a racquet until tomorrow, five of his companions in the United States list advanced to second-round brackets with a total loss of two sets. Bobby Riggs, Los Angeles youngster seeded No. 2; Frankie Parker, Davis Cup mate of Budge, from Milwaukee, Wis., seeded No. 3; Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, No. 4, and John McDiarmid, of Princeton, N. J., and Johnny Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., ranked seventh and eighth, all won their first tests.

Welsh defeated Joseph Fishback, of New York, junior star, 1—6, 9—7, 6—0, 6—1; Hunt trounced Robert Harman, of Oakland, Calif., 6—2, 6—1, 6—4; and Mitchell won by default from Carl Fischer, of Detroit. Lynch bowed to Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

Other Stars Advance.

Like Budge, Baron Gottfried von Cramm, his chief rival, drew a first round bye. But the German's countryman, Henner Henkel, led a contingent of foreigners that included the three Japanese, Jiro Yamagishi, Fumuturu Nakano and Hideo Nishimura, and Charles Edgar Hare and Clarence M. Jones, of England, into their second-round brackets.

Pacing the women survivors was Alice Marble, the stylish San Francisco blonde, who opened defense of the title she won last year from Helen Jacobs with a 6—3, 7—5 conquest of pretty, sun-tanned Jacqueline Horner, of France.

Joining her were Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, ranked fourth; Dorothy May Bundy, No. 6, and Carolin Babcock, No. 7. Anita Lizana, chunky Chilean, who is No 2 on the foreign seeded list and the champion's likely semifinal rival, was accompanied in straight-set victories by Germany's Marie Luise Horn, seeded fourth, and Freda James and Margot Lumb English, Wightman Cup stars, who fill the last two places on the foreign ranking list.

Only three seeded men—McDiarmid, Van Ryn and Jones—were carried into extra sets.

Henkel is Impressive.

Of the three other Americans, Parker's victory was the most decisive, as he waded through William Gillespie, of Atlanta, Ga., with the loss of only three games. The scores were 6—2, 6—1, 6—0.

Riggs and Grant had a bit more difficulty. The Coast youngster, who is in the same half of the draw with Von Cramm, was carried to deuce in the sets of his 7—5, 6—1, 9—7 conquest of Billy McGehee, of New Orleans, while Grant found a fellow scrambler in Murray D. Deloford, a young and sturdy Englishman, who took him to 6—4, 9—7, 6—3.

Henkel and Yamagishi, who followed von Cramm in the foreign ranking list, were impressive. The 21-year-old German ripped through the first and third sets of his match with Russell Bobbitt, a youngster from Atlanta, with a loss of only one game, and was carried to 7—5 in the second stanza only because he elected to dispense with his fierce first serve until his rival was leading at 5—3.

Mason-Dixon Match Lost by Mrs. Meckley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 2.—The expected semi-finalists, Virginia Guilfoil, Bernie Wall, Dorothy Traung and Mary Morrison, comprised the round of four after today's matches in the Mason-Dixon championship, as Washington's lone representative, Mrs. Betty Meckley, bowed 5 and 4 to Miss Traung.

Virginia Guilfoil, medalist and national finalist in '36, won 3 and 1 over Mrs. Jack Hoblizell, of Parkersburg, a back nine rally accounting for the victory after she turned one down at the ninth.

Mrs. Meckley, semi-finalist here the past two years, could not cope with the mighty tee shots for her California opponent, and bowed on the fourteenth green. Three stymies on the fifth, eighth and twelfth holes aided Miss Traung, picked by Helen Hicks to win the title, in scoring the victory.

Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., aided by a 40-foot putt on the sixteenth hole, defeated Mary Fine, of Trenton, 2 and 1. Mary Morrison, Henry Picard's protege from Hershey, Pa., won 4 and 3 over Sally Elson of Columbus, Ohio, a long game advantage giving the winner the edge.

Washington players did not fare well in other flights, Mrs. J. A. Marr losing in the second consolation, 1 up by Mrs. G. W. Trout, of Findlay, Ohio, who capped a 40-foot putt for a deuce on the last green. Mrs. Herbert Weber lost 4 and 3 to Mrs. W. H. Seagrave, of Beechwood, Ohio.

Mrs. Wingard Wins.

Dorais Praises Baugh After Big Game.

By Shirley Povich.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 2.

Gus Dorais, the fellow who designed the winning attack for the College All-Stars against the National Pro League champions, last night at Chicago, was back in Detroit today saying nice things about this guy Sammy Baugh, whom George Marshall is trying to get into a Redskin uniform.

POVICH.

Dorais, who is Detroit University's coach, is in a position to talk about such as Baugh and forward passers in general. For Dorais was one of those young upstarts from Notre Dame who confounded the East by whipping West Point's football team 20-odd years ago with the really first applied exhibit of the forward passing science.

In fact, Dorais is the guy who threw all those forward passes that day on the Hudson Plains when the West Point team was operating in circles trying to find a defense for the South Benders' overhead play. The man who was catching Dorais' passes that day was a young, stocky, flat-nosed end named Knute Kockne, who later did fairly well as a coach.

* * * *

And so this department tilted an attentive ear when Dorais began to recite his impressions of Sammy Baugh, who pushed the collegiate all-stars to their 6-to-0 victory over the Greenbay Packers in the collegians' first successful attempt to beat a champion pro team.

* * * *

"He'll do until some supernatural passer comes along," Dorais was saying. "He showed me something last night. He showed me that he's all the Texas people claimed him to be. It didn't make any difference to Baugh whether he was on the sport or not. Those Pros knew he was back there to pass, but that didn't stop him. That ball he threw to Tinsley for the touchdown was floating so lightly through the air that a babe could have plucked it.

* * * *

"Baugh took plenty of time back there. He wasn't long discovering that he didn't have to hurry with Vernon Huffman, of Indiana, back there blocking for him. He took full advantage of Huffman's blocking and didn't let that ball go until we shook somebody loose. And then when he did throw it, it was a thing of beauty. If any-

R. Mangrum, Guldahl Share Hershey Lead

By the Associated Press.

Hershey, Pa., Sept. 2.—Shattering par by six strokes to equal the course record of 67, Ralph Guldahl, of Chicago, National Open champion, and Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, tied for the lead today at the end of the first round in the 72-hole $5,000 Hershey Open tournament.

Henry Picard, of Hershey, winner of last year's $1,200 first prize, was third with a three-under-par 70. Tied for fourth were Francis Ford, Charleston, S. C. amateur; Charles Schneider and Sam Byrd, of Philadelphia, and Ben Hogan, Fort Worth, Tex., with 71's.

Close behind were Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., and Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield Center, Conn., with 72's. Frank Kringle, of Linden, N. J.; Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, each posted par 73's.

Mangrum, who got seven birdies on the first 17, missed a chance to hang up a new record. He failed to sink an 18-inch putt on the last green. Guldahl, in turn, saw his opportunity to shatter the record previously established by Henry Picard and Jimmy Hines, go on the 417-yard sixteenth, where he took a one-over-par 5. Guldahl rammed home five birdies and got an eagle on the par 5 thirteenth.

Riot at Stadium; Ray Steele Victor

A dressing room riot in which shoes, liniment bottles and other miscellaneous missiles were hurled with reckless abandon climaxed last night's wrestling show at Griffith Stadium.

The combatants were Jack Patterson, Joe Cox's opponent in the semifinal bout, Cox, a half dozen policemen, and a group of dressing room attendants. All escaped with minor bruises, but only after the enraged Patterson had turned the room topsy-turvy, leaving a trail of debris in his wake.

The trouble began in the ring when Cox twisted two strands of the ring ropes around Patterson's neck and left him dangling and gagging there. When Referee Burns finally unloosed him, the hapless Patterson was pounced on by Cox who executed six quick body slams that left his foe unconscious.

Patterson revived and again fainted, and was carried bodily to the dressing quarters. When he revived there the fight started.

Ray Steele tossed Reb Russell in the feature bout after 19½ minutes of work. Cliff Olsen drew with Walter Podolok. Chief Thunderbird tossed George Lenihan in 15 minutes, and Wee Willie Davis pinned Mays McLain in 14½ minutes.

Sington's Felled by Bean Ball

Freddie Wants to Stay in Game—But Sent to Showers.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Sept. 2.—Big Freddie Sington was beaned and two Washington pitchers were brutally clubbed this afternoon by the unfeeling Detroit Tigers, who put an end to Washington's winning streak.

Hank Greenberg made it final. The big Detroit first baseman, who had bashed out his thirty-first home run of the season with a man on base back in the fourth inning, swatted his thirty-second home run of the season in the tenth to break an 8-8 tie and bring an abrupt end to proceedings.

The score was 9 to 8.

For one fearful moment tragedy appeared to have stalked on the scene. Sington, at bat in the eighth inning, was struck on the head by a high inside pitch flung by George Coffman and dropped to the ground as if pole-axed.

Manager Mickey Cochrane, lately recovered from a triple skull fracture suffered under the same circumstances, sprang to Sington's side from the Detroit bench, but the big outfielder, after groveling for a moment, regained his feet and insisted on continuing in the game. He appeared unhurt by the ball which struck him high on the skull, behind his left ear. Manager Harris led Sington to the Nats' dressing room.

Jimmy DeShong and Monte Weaver had the Tigers licked but couldn't keep 'em licked. DeShong had a 4-1 lead as early as the fourth inning and, he was ahead, 8-4, as late as the seventh. But the Tigers packed six of their 14 hits into the last four innings, tied the score against Weaver in the ninth, and won the ball game very quickly in the tenth.

Manager Mickey Cochrane refused to countenance the presence of Baron Poffenberger on the mound for the Tigers any longer than three and a third innings. The Williamsport, Md., boy who had recorded nine victories for the Tigers against three defeats, was not exactly a puzzle to the Nats.

He walked Mel Almada, the first man to face him, and a bit later, with two out, he pitched a two-bagger to Johnny Stone, whose clout into deep right-center produced a 1-0 lead for James Brooklyn DeShong.

But DeShong gave that run right back to the Tigers in the second inning, when with one out, Rudy York, who was dealing strictly in singles today, led off with a hit to center and romped to third on White's double

Post Notes on FISHING

By Bill Ackerman.

Catches have been more than spotty, in spite of the fact that in several sections of the bay and the river there are more and larger shoals of fish than old-timers have known for many years. Those made up of stripers are rather on the small side, fish than old-timers have known

ACKERMAN

The two possible exceptions are the shoal off Tall Timbers and the one that has been feeding between Herring Bay and Bloody Point.

Around Piney Point the fishing has been good four days out of five, but without rhyme or reason. One day, particularly if dark, the rock strike throughout the day and average around 5 and 6 pounds. Feathers, drones, spinners—all work equally well, and the catches run from 40 to 80—really exceptional fishing, and fun, because no weight is needed on the lines.

But on the following day the same shoals raising around in every direction, hour after hour, are productive of so few strikes that they can be counted on the fingers, until an hour or two before dark and they start again with action so fast and furious that when dark does come the anglers are really glad to see it.

* * * *

Abe Blustein and his party spent just such a day this week fishing with Capt. L. M. Spriggs. On the following day Sid Atlas caught them all day long. Yesterday George Lovell, with friends who had never tried the sport, failed all day long to get more than an occasional strike, but in the evening caught 20 nice ones.

So it goes—the best fishing that we know of at present, but still short of deserving recommendation, for it is hard to say what it will do tomorrow or the next day. The thought, persists that the right time is not yet, that it lies ahead; that the present catches are due more than anything else to the easterly weather.

* * * *

The one catch in the bay that seems worth noting—was of blues—big blues—blues that would average close to 10 pounds. Sam Hanlein told us about the party, which included Ted Shaum, Dick Crandall and "Bunny" Rabbit and they were fishing the Gooses.

Only ten of them, to be sure, and not to be taken that the time is ripe, for the several days following have failed, at least as far as we know, to produce any more. Enough evidence, however, that the big fellows are on the way up and with the right kind of weather—it can't be long.

The general thought among local anglers in regard to the fishing contest is to wait until they get a really big fish before taking their entry to one of the sport stores to weigh it in.

Well they are making a real mistake, for these are the easy weeks; ones in which fine pieces of fishing tackle are going for little more than pan-size fish. The competition is bound to be keener as the big blues and rock comes up and under the shore.

Trips to good fishing grounds, some for five or six hours and others for a full day, for some lucky angler and his party, just for catching a big fish. It might be on one of Capt. Joe Lore's boats at Solomons, or one of Capt. Harry Woodburn's at the same place. Capt. Edgar Bowen is just as willing to put one of his boats out for a day, if yours is the fish that takes the trick.

Preparations for the Fishing Fair at Solomons on September 18 and 19 are going along under a full head of steam. As far off as Pittsburg anglers are making up their parties for this two-day Fun Feat, to take advantage of the special train that will be run to Solomons.

In all probability the Old Bay Line steamer "State of Virginia" will provide an unusual chance for sportsmen to fish and live on the bay for these two or three days, for the plans are to run this steamer as a hotel boat.

The trophies, to be given for big fish, odd fish and many other events during the Fair, will be on display at Ollie Atlas' D street sport store from September 10 to 14.

Muny Junior Finals Today

Bob Morris, 1936 finalist, and Bill Leapley, 16-year-old East Potomac player, advanced to the final round of the Public Links junior championship yesterday with double victories and will play for the title over the 36-hole distance at the downtown public links course today.

Morris disposed of Keith Kallio in th morning round, 3 and 1, and shot par golf in the afternoon to swamp Bill Nealis, 7 and 6. Nealis upset Medalist Julian Murphy in the second round on the twentieth hole after sinking a 40-foot putt on the eighteenth green to square the match.

Leapley advanced with a .-and-3 victory over Ed Bodnar and a 1-up triumph over George Graham, although the latter nearly pulled the match from the fire after being 4 down with as many to play. Graham defeated Eli Blank in the morning, 5 and 4.

Morris, two years Leapley's senior, is favored in today's match due to his par shooting yesterday, although Leapley pulled the biggest surprise today in eliminating Graham, son of the Rock Creek course manager. The 36-hole finals start at 9 a. m.

In gay and picturesque setting at the Roosevelt Stadium, the Department of Playgrounds staged its fourteenth annual girls' city-wide track meet yesterday and a group of comely misses from Georgetown romped off with the honors on the strength of several right arms.

For three of the four first places gained by the winners were attained in a muscle event, the basketball throw for distance, the other five-pointer bein gained in the 220-yard shuttle relay race for the 100-pound class.

Georgetown's fourth and last first place, the victory which really removed the championship from the hands of Sherwood Playground, where it has languidly reposed for the past two years, was taken in the 220-yard shuttle relay for the 100-pounders. The winning foursome was comprised of Alice Follin, Helen MacDaniels, Virginia Fortune and Viola Beck. Miss Beck turned the tables running as the anchor member when she unloosed a tremendous spurt to finish some 30 feet ahead of her nearest rival, Jean McFarren, of Virginia Avenue, second place winner. Third place went to Potomac Avenue.

The morning festivities were the gayest and most colorful in the history of the meet. As a hot victrola flung out the latest popular "swing" tunes, which were amplified over the public address system, the girls had the time of their young lives strutting in the latest in culottes, what the well dressed "scanty" girl should and does wear.

Although Georgetown took the athletic honors, in an unofficial poll first place in the equally unofficial fashion and style show was awarded after lengthy deliberation to Jefferson for "loud costumes" and to Pallisades for subdued style. The honorary prize in this contest consisted of fleeting glances of envy from competitors and "who cares" glances.

Army-Navy Net Final Set Today

Marge Robinson and Dorette Miller, seasoned District tournament players, are scheduled to meet this afternoon in the title round of the Army-Navy Country Club's annual invitation tourney at 2:30 on the Virginia club courts.

Mrs. Robinson, op-seeded entry, reached the final round yesterday by trouncing Charlotte Decker, District girls' champion, 6—3, 6—0, while Mrs. Miller, seeded No. 3, advanced at the expense of Johanna Zetleemeier, 6—1, 6—2.

* * * *

"Course, he's got a bit of an edge out there when he's in the tail back position. He doesn't have to throw that ball. He can romp with it and the smart team won't rush him too fast and get sucked in. They've got to be wary about it, and that gives Baugh time to look the field over.

* * * *

"He's an exception, that Baugh. Usually, when a coach picks up one of these passing babies and sticks him in there to throw, he sacrifices something in the running attack or the blocking or on the defense. But Baugh is no drawback in any way. He can do his share of the blocking and he's big enough to take a beating. And he will run that ball for you, if you like.

* * * *

"But I'd say that outside of his passing, his best point is his defensive play. He's a dream guy as a safety man. Cagey, smart and fast and they stay tackled when Sammy hits 'em. You notice he was always the safety man when he was in there last night. I had a lot of fellows among those 65 on the team who came to me with reputations as safety men, but Baugh was tops.

"George Marshall has got something there."

* * * *

If Baugh's sensational feats at Texas Christian University did not stamp him for a brilliant future in professional football, then his performance against the Packers last night apparently did. Because it is history that any of the college all-stars who are standouts in the Soldiers' Field classics always make good pros.

* * * *

Tuffy Leeman's success is in point. The George Washington U., star who stole the show last season as a member of the all-collegiate against the Detroit Lions was a sensation from the day he joined the New York Giants. Football talent carries over from the campus to the big league pay roll.

* * * *

In fact, all one needs to do is scan the roster of the pro teams to clinch the argument that the all-star game in Chicago is an incubator for pro league stars. Any guy who makes that all-star bunch can enter pro football with better than a reasonable chance of making good.

In fact, six of the regulars who were on the Packers—the pro league champions—last night at Soldiers' Field, are graduates of the all-star game. Both of the Packers regular ends, Don Hutson, former Alabama and Milt Gantenbein, former Wisconsin, were stars for the collegiates on Soldiers' Field a few years back and their No. 3, Wayland Becker, former Marquette was also on an all college team.

* * * *

Darre Kester, the Packers center, wore the college all-star uniform after graduating from T. C. U. as did Ernie Smith, the Packers tackle from Southern California, and Engbesten, their center. Joe Laws, and Bob Monett, in the Packers backfield also drew down chores as members of the college stars in former Soldiers' Field battles.

Barabas New Hoya Coach; Whelan Quits

Georgetown University officials yesterday announced the appointment of Steve Barabas, an alumnus, as assistant backfield coach. The appointment is effective immediately.

Barabas, a hard-hitting fullback in his undergraduate days, starred in the Hoya backfield from 1926 through 1929, and was mentioned for all-Eastern honors in his senior year.

"Dutch" Bergman, head coach of Catholic University's gridmen, yesterday reluctantly accepted the resignation of Tom Whelan, assistant backfield coach of the Cards last year, who intends to devote his time to business. Whelan, however, will assist the Brookland mentor on a part-time basis.

Another assistant, Vincent Fraatz, end coach, will not be on hand when the squad begins pre-season training today. He has been granted a brief leave of absence and will be married to Miss Ann McGovern, at Jermy, Pa., this morning.

Maryland's squad was augmented by the addition of four players yesterday, and another, Johnny McCarthy, is due back this morning. Mike Surgent, regular guard; Rip Hewitt and Frank Skotnicki, backs, and Bob Brown, 215-pound tackle, were the newcomers. Only Bill Bryant, Pershing Mondorff and Waverly Wheeler are missing, and all are expected in camp within ten days.

NATS-TIGERS

And so it was that DeShong was in front, 8 to 4, when the game wore into the seventh. A half-minute later, he was in front only 8 to 5, because Bill Rogell swatted a homer into the upper deck in rightfield.

In the eighth, the Tigers reinstalled themselves nicely in the ball game. Jimmy DeShong, in fact, couldn't get anybody out and Harris had to call on Monte Weaver after the Nats' 8-to-5 lead had melted to 8 to 7. DeShong pitched a rightfield single to Gehringer, then he pitched a tremendous triple to Hank Greenberg, who blasted the ball 420 feet to the right center fence. The first man out in the inning was DeShong. Harris took him out after he walked Rudy York.

Monte Weaver then took care of the situation superbly by getting rid of White on a grounder to Mihalic, disposing of Owen on a pop to Kuhel and striking out Rogell, to leave that tying tally on second base.

At The Post WITH BILL BENNINGS

Marlboro Race Track, Md., Sept. 2.

Dear Al:

Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan has been trying to arrange another meeting of Timber Lady and High Hedge, believing that the latter might beat his rival if they meet on a fast track. However, none of the owners of other horses here want any parts of the speed demons and Brennan can't run a two-horse race. He will make another try to arrange a field for Saturday. With one program flooded out, who would have thought that the officials would have to import the sprinkler truck from Bowie to lay the dust? This meeting is gathering momentum. Yesterday's betting was over the $75,000 mark and, with good weather on Saturday, the plant may set a record for wagering. The horsemen here are fighting over the services of Freddie Kelly and Eddie Kilgore, the crack apprentice riders. Almost every horse entered has the apprentice allowance claimed for him. When these boys are not available, the trainers have to use a regular jockey and pick up five pounds. Mannie Berg, a veteran rider, is doing well since Palumbo, Root and Lauch left for Wheeling. A sight worth seeing: Pork Chop and his friends cleaning up the lemonade after the crowd has left for the day.

First Race—Blue Prelude showed speed at Delaware and may run away with this. Oteebee is a fair sort and seems nicely placed, should win if the top one stops. Broken Rhythm is dropping down a bit and promises to be a keen factor.

Third Race—Pegadette made a good showing in that maiden effort the other day. With some intelligent handling, this one may get home at fair odds. Sakuntala, in the money last out, is dangerous. Fernlin will need an off track.

Fourth Race—Monocacy appears good enough to down these ordinary platers. This one likes the track and needs only a ride. Hogarty, with a shift in jockeys, will be a keen factor. Viva Pete to take care of the others.

Fifth Race—Lady Buck is returning to form. She has worked well and her last indicates that she will soon visit the winner's circle. Breaks off the rail and I'm going to string along. Shaggy Ann and Jim Moss to take care of the others.

Sixth Race—Povel, on a fast track, will be hard to beat in this field. Needs only to run back to one of his good races. Tuleyries Star and Star Finn should be close in the dash to the wire.

Seventh Race—Apathy gets in light for this test and should take down the main money. Early Call will be in the thick of contention. Luculent has been racing into condition and could surprise among these.

Best bet—Pedagette.

James Boy Triumphs at Marlboro

Jockey Rides Well, Wins Purse for Ailing Daughter.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro Race Track, Md., Sept. 2.—Jockey Al Tryon, veteran of many years of saddle work, sat in the jockey's room this afternoon waiting for his only assignment of the program, his mount on James Boy. He was handed a telegram which told him that Myrtle, his 13-year-old daughter, had been stricken with infantile paralysis at Toronto. Tryon, needing the money that a winner would bring, went out on the back of James Boy and rode one of the best races of his long career.

Despite a miserable start that found James Boy, a $4.90 favorite, virtually left at the post, Tryon brought the gelding home three-lengths ahead of Gemwick in the Marlboro Hotel Cup, the feature race of the program.

When starter Welter rang the bell, James Boy was sideways in the end of the stall gate. The gelding hesitated for a moment as the others, with the exception of Counter Pass, went bounding up the track. In desperation, Tryon slashed James Boy with his whip and the gelding ran after the field.

From that point, James Boy, with Tryon riding frantically, made a steady climb. With the mile and a sixteenth race half over, James Boy was in second place. He then moved around Gemwick to take command and went on to open a good gap through the stretch.

In addition to winning a bet for the favorite players, Tryon and James Boy teamed to bring a fine trophy, presented by the Marlboro Hotel, to Trainer Charley Beal. Beal had announced yesterday that he was going to sit up all night and guard James Boy. He also is the trainer of Veritas, the mare which was believed to have been poisoned here.

Mrs. Arthur White's Never Cease, a $9.10 betting proposition, turned in a smashing race to win by a neck from the favored Jim Cornell in the first race. Needmore finished third in the group of seven. Never Cease was capably handled by Mannie Berg.

Welsh Lad, a son of Prince of Wales, drew out to a long lead in the early running and easily defeated Tuleyries Las and Monologue in the second event. Welsh Lad was an odds-on favorite at a $3.90 mutuel and was piloted by Apprentice Eddie Kilgore.

Kilgore came right back to ride his second straight winner in the third race. He had Anjoe, the property of Amil Booker, in front most of the way to win by two lengths. Magic Gift was second and Ranicilla third. The winner paid $11.60.

Poll Parrot, with Freddie Kelly in the saddle, came down to the finish line 2½ lengths in front of Gee Sharp in the fourth race. Bringing his backers a $7 mutuel, Poll Parrot was in front after the first quarter. Lapis closed a gap to be third.

By the simple method of being first in front and staying there, Kepi, a veteran son of Madhatter, won the sixth race at a $29.60 mutuel. He downed the favorite, Aella, byt 2½ lengths. Simple Singer was third.

Don Creole Is Victor In Auto City Feature

Detroit, Sept. 2 (AP).—Don Creole, 4-year-old gelding of the Odessa Farms, took an easy victory in the Auto City Purse, 6-furlong feature event at the Detroit Fair Grounds today.

Don Creole finished a length and a half before Candescent, a B. C. Carpenter entry, with Shoeless Joe, C. Smythe's 5-year-old horse, a nose behind for third. Candescent set the pace early, but the winner moved up on the outside in the upper turn and took the lead after being straightened out in the stretch. He paid $5.80. The time was 1:12 2-5.

White Sox Win Twice Over Bosox

Thorton Lee Wins Opener, 4-2, Nightcap Is Slugfest.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—The Boston Red Sox, making their last appearance of the season at Comiskey Park today, lost both ends of a doubleheader to the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 2, and 10 to 8.

Thornton Lee won the opener by holding the Red Sox to four hits while his mates scored all 4 of their runs by homers, two by Boze Berger and one each by Mike Kreevich and Dixie Walker. The Chicago team made only eight hits, however, off Johnny Marcum and Joe Gonzales.

The nightcap was a slugfest with the White Sox pounding four Boston pitchers for 16 hits, and the Red Sox amassing 14 of their own, including Joe Cronin's fifteenth four-bagger of the year.

Intense heat held the crowd to less than 10,000.

Englishman Breaks Wood's 5-Year Mark

By the Associated Press.

Locarno, Switzerland, Sept. 2.—Sir Malcolm Campbell gave the motorboat world a new international record really worth shooting at today.

For the second time in as many days, the British sportsman, holder of the land speed record of 301.13 miles per hour, smashed Gar Wood's five-year-old unlimited hydroplane standard of 124.86 miles per hour. This time the 52-year-old speed king boosted it from 125.7559 miles per hour to 129.4164 miles per hour.

Finding the waters of Lake Maggiore favorable for a new record try, Sir Malcolm twice sent his powerful single-engined Bluebird over the measured course—negotiating the outward run at 130.3479 miles per hour and the homeward trip at 128.4849 miles per hour.

Today's runs were uneventful in contrast to the Briton's experience yesterday when two intake pipes burst during his record run and flooded one-third of the boat.

The new record will be submitted to the International Motor Yachting Union at Brussels for formal approval.

Wood set the old record with his monster Miss America X, powered by four engines and weighing more than three times as much as Bluebird, at Algonac, Mich., in 1932.

Detroit Softballers Win World Junior Title

Buffalo, N. Y. Sept. 2 (AP).—A team from Detroit, Mich., won the junior softball championship of the world today by defeating Topeka, Kans., 7 to 6.

Detroit went to bat in the seventh, trailing 6 to 5, but rallied for two runs in the last half of the final inning.

Pirates Score Five Runs in 9th; Win, 11-7

Down Philadelphia After 3-Run Rally in 8th Puts Them Behind.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 2.—The Phillies rallied in the eighth and apparently scored enough runs to win, but the Pittsburgh Pirates stole their thunder in the ninth inning, tallied five times and won the final game of a National League series here today, 11 to 7.

Trailing, 6 to 4, when they came to bat in the eighth, the Phils, thanks to an error by Floyd Young, counted three times and went into the lead. However the Bucs smacked Wayne Lamaster for five markers in the last frame to break their seven-game losing streak.

Paul Waner and Young connected for homers, but Jensen was the batting hero with five hits in five times to the plate, including two doubles and a triple.

Aboard Coast Guard Cutter Argo, off Marblehead, Mass., Sept. 2 (AP).—Harold S. Vanderbilt's successful cup defender Ranger today won the fifth race and made a clean sweep of the J-sloop international yacht series for the town of Marblehead trophy.

Ranger led Gerard B. Lambert's Yankee over the finish line by about a minute and one-half.

T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavor II, Chandler Hovey's Rainbow and Frederic Sigrist's Endeavor I trailed in that order.

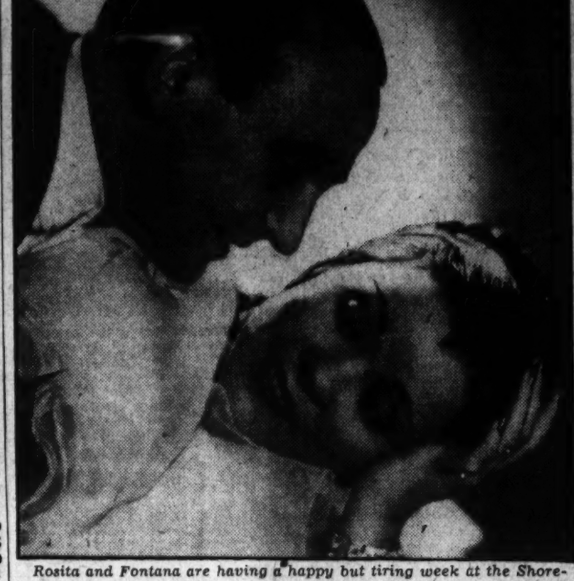
Dancing on the Shoreham Terrace



Rosita and Fontana are having a happy but tiring week at the Shoreham's cool terrace. The guests demand encore after encore. Rosita and Fontana are internationally known interpreters of the dance.

Capital to Get First Glimpse Of 'Big Apple'

By Chanticleer

Preparations go forward at Boulevard Farms for that big affair tonight when the "Big Apple," that new dance craze, is presented to Washingtonians for the first time. Efforts are being made to remove everything breakable and the rest is being tied to the floor. The "Big Apple" isn't violent—but it's active and stimulating.

Remember, the "Big Apple" is the newest thing in the line of the terpsichorean art and everybody will be doing it, or at least talking about it, in the next few days. Boulevard Farms is the first nightery to offer it and the young folk from near and far are expected to be on hand.

Even though you never expect to do this hot new step, you won't want to miss the fun. At the very least you want to be able to talk about it.

• • • •

Don Hooten, who does rope tricks on the bill at the Shoreham Terrace this week, is too good a showman to let anything good slip through his fingers. After the fight the other night he added his interpretation a la tap dance to the closing round of the fistcuffs. The audience has turned out to be a cruel and relentless one this week: they just won't let Rosita and Fontana quit! Guests demand encore after encore.

No cathedral like atmosphere to Brinkley's, that Southeast spot, but if you really want to take your hair down some evening and have a swell time being just yourself, join the crowds of good-timers going down there. Carl Guenther and his boys for your dancing.

Did you ever stop to think what can be done for or with 75 cents? Well, one of the most surprising values is the dinner served Sundays at the air-cooled Mayfair. Beverly, Jack and Leo will entertain in addition. Now how can you do better than that?

Maybe you want something different to do. Something with a great sense of hospitality and plenty of good things to eat. The answer would be the River Bend. Its a suggestion for tomorrow night.

Recall Troops From Abroad, Veterans Urge

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 2.—The National Convention of Veterans of Foreign Wars telegraphed to President Roosevelt tonight a "demand" that American armed forces be withdrawn from foregin soil.

The veterans excepted only "a minimum" of troops needed to protect United States property.

Calling also for "mandatory neutrality legislation" to keep America out of war, the former soldiers told the President:

"Veterans of Foreign Wars . . . hate war."

The telegram concluded with "an urgent request for a public statement from the President on American foreign policies."

"Mandatory neutrality is the only guarantee of the American people against involvement in war," it added, and it proposed the Navy give full protection to Americans in war zones only for a "definite, limited period of time."

Buying Surge Lifts Wheat 2¾c a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—The wheat market developed into a big broad affair today after a listless start. Trade authorities, plagued by the heat and humidity, ascribed the firmness in wheat to unexpected strength at Buenos Aires and Liverpool, even though rains in the Argentine were expected to prove beneficial to dry wheat lands.

Trade was only spasmodically active during the first half of the session but expanded later to a marked degree. Prices advanced 2½ to 2¾ cents a bushel, but reacted about a cent before the close.

Cotton Rallies $1.50 Per Bale

New York, Sept. 2 (AP).—Rallies in cotton were extended up to $1.50 a bale today on a covering movement which found contracts scarce. December sold up from 9.13 to 9.36 and ended at 9.34, with final prices 26 to 31 points net higher.

The market opened 8 to 11 points higher in response to steadier Liverpool cables and foreign buying. Other demand appeared when offerings proved light, and early in the day prices showed gains of about $1 a bale over recent lows.

A belief that some of the recent bearish factors had been discounted and an improved technical position were partly responsible for the buying. Heavy rains in the central belt also were considered unfavorable.

Bank of France Lowers Rate to 3½ Per Cent

Half Per Cent Reduction Regarded as Sign of Improvement.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 2.—The Bank of France today lowered its discount rate from 4 to 3½ per cent to make loans cheaper in keeping with Finance Minister Georges Bonnet's plans for re-building the nation's economic and financial structure.

Financial circles interpreted the lowering of the rate fixed August 3 as meaning the government was returning to a policy of easier money and no longer felt obliged to impose the higher rate as a check on speculation and the flight of capital. The bourse was slightly easier, but this was attributed to uneasiness over the international situation, not France's domestic troubles.

Reduction of the discount rate followed closely completion of that part of Bonnet's reconstruction program carried out under emergency dictatorial powers, which expired August 31.

Approval Awaited.

These measures now must be approved by Parliament when it reconvenes later this month. By that time Premier Camille Chautemps hopes the country will show sufficient signs of recovery to convince Parliament he should retain the premiership. The lower discount rate is considered one sign of improvement.

Before leaving Paris Bonnet said the 100 decrees had stabilized the treasury position, balanced the ordinary budget and greatly reduced the deficit in the extraordinary budget.

The rate on 30-day loans also was lowered from 4 to 3½ per cent and that on loans on stock security from 5 to 4½ per cent.

The statement of the Bank of France indicated the heavy outflow of gold which was going on when Bonnet took office had been reduced to a slow trickle. The bank's reserves of 55,717,532,724 francs (about $2,062,000,000) were higher by 378,325 francs (about $14,000) than the week before.

Two Reserve Banks Cut Discount Rates

The Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday that reserve banks at Kansas City and San Francisco would reduce their discount rates from 2 to 1½ per cent tomorrow. The reductions left only two reserve banks which have not cut discount rates in recent weeks—those in Philadelphia and Cleveland.

Stocks Decline With Some Breaks as Turnover Passes Million Mark.

New York, Sept. 2.—Speculation began to wake up in Wall street. The sugar bill gave a fillip to the raw sugar market and to the sugar company stocks, wheat prices jumped and cotton rallied. December wheat closed 1⅞ higher at 107⅝ cents a bushel. Cotton gained about 75 cents a bale. Stocks lost heavily, developed some resistance to the early knockdown and then found it difficult to hold the lower positions as margin selling and other liquidation of a frightened sort came in.

Stock turnover was the largest in a long time at considerably in excess of a million shares. Government bonds liked neither the evidence of firmer money, as shown in the sharp cut in excess bank reserves estimated for this district, nor the mounting Treasury deficit. Prices weakened.

As if to confirm the markets' fears, the day's war news was darker on both the eastern and western fronts. With Japan going ahead with plans to force all China under her dominion and to chase out all foreign interests, and with submarine warfare getting under way in all parts of the Mediterranean and along the Spanish Atlantic coast, the chances for a general war are increasing mightily. That is a prospect to frighten markets, and while great relief will be felt if nothing develops to involve nations not already heavily engaged in the fighting, there is little hope of any early settlement among the chief compatants.

Hurting Trade.

That means world trade is bound to suffer in the coming months, both from an interruption to its normal flow because of blockades and diversion of demand from civilian to military use, also because of currency and exchange difficulties. On the currency side the heaviest blows will come later. Japan is now shipping out a great amount of gold in order to maintain as long as possible the purchasing ability abroad of the yen, which is reeling under the blows of heavy imports of war materials. At the same time Japan is cutting down her merchandise imports outside war materials to the absolute minimum, and the depreciating yen probably is giving some stimulus to merchandise exports.

We are losing trade with Japan because that country won't take it and with China because the Chinese can't take it, partly because the Japs won't let them. The Japs are acquiring dollars from their gold shipments and largely are selling the dollars for sterling, steadily adding to our national debt.

Meanwhile, with the usual two-month delay, the Department of Commerce has managed to publish the monthly foreign trade figures, giving more proof that as Congressional appropriations for the various departments and bureaus rise, and as the number of employes and their wages increase, the efficiency of the outfit declines. Trade in July, it it turns out, was virtually stationary on the export side, but a sharp fall in imports, probably under the weight of the huge food crops under harvest here, put the balance of trade on the "favorable" side, excluding the silver dealings.

Inventory.

An explanation for much of the current fall in buying orders in steel and other important industries is that inventories were built up too high in the spring. That view of the matter is expressed in the current monthly business review published by the National City Bank. Stoppage of production under the force of the C. I. O drive to dominate industry, the general rise in prices that was taking place at the time, and the expectation of a shortage of goods and a further price rise for later in the year encouraged stocking up. In other lines actual price declines have been far from numerous, so that such surplus stocks of goods as are now being carried by distributors probably can be worked off without loss, even though in the process the primary producers have to curtail operations somewhat. The process of inventory reduction might move more swiftly if prices were lower—provided the trend was not downward, for falling prices shuts off purchasing, just as the sight of rising prices tends to increase it.

The Great Sympathizer.

In signing the sugar bill, which he thought might lift the price of sugar, President Roosevelt expressed sympathy for the housewife. Insofar as "housewife" means consumers generally, the President might well afford a little sympathy.

His pet plans for killing cattle, sheep and pigs, cutting corn, wheat, potato and other food production, and lifting prices generally (especially food prices) back to some supposed ideal level of the old inflationary days, through various New Deal inflationary devices, are taking hundreds of millions from the family food cash box where the sugar bill may require a few thousands. It ought to be a great comfort to those who have to pay through the nose for food to support their great leader's inordinate spending capacity that they have his sympathy. They'll need a great deal more than that before the cards are cut again.

Pierce-Arrow Dodges Query on Farley

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 2 (AP).—Stockholders of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Corporation voted today approval of a plan for formation of a new corporation to enable the company to enter the medium-priced field. The plan provides for the new corporation to take over present business of the company and raise $10,700,000 through stock sale. At today's meeting a stockholder asked Arthur J. Chanter, president, to verify a report that Postmaster General James A. Farley will head the new company. Chanter declined to say more than that "a person of national importance will be invited to become executive head of the corporation."

District Figure Is $3,440; New York State Next With $3,042.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Life insurance policies sold in the District of Columbia now average greater in size than any in the country, statistics in the monthly survey of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn., reveal. Average size of policies sold here during the first half of this year was $3,440 and the only State which had an average above $3,000 was New York, with one of $3,042. Delaware headed the list last year with an average of $3,446, as compared with the local figure of $3,112, and New York was third, with $2,876.

Maryland's average arose from $2,661 in the first half of last year to $2,766 for the first half of the present. Virginia's average policy during last year's comparative period was $2,234 and in this year's advanced to $2,339. The District of Columbia was far ahead of the average for the country in volume.

Although sales for the Nation were 3 per cent less than those of July, 1936, sales in the District during the month were $6,788,000, or 10 per cent above those of the month last year. For the first seven months of the current year, National sales were 6 per cent above those of the period in 1936, and the District of Columbia's total for the seven months was $46,876,000, or 13 per cent in advance of last year's like period.

Mr. Holleman began his career with this company in Jackson, Miss., September 1, 1927, and after outstanding accomplishments as an agent, was promoted to assist in agency work at the home office.

In November, 1934, he was appointed general agent for the company in the District of Columbia. Since that time he has built the agency to a position of prominence, and has attained recognition as one of the leading managers in Washington, and the company.

Mr. Ball, who is manager of the Washington district of the company, will be accompanied by G. H. Baldwin, W. M. Miller and C. A. Wickham, all representatives of the company in Washington.

These men won their invitations to the week's convention by qualifying for the High Point Club, honorary sales organization which includes in its membership all representatives who secured better than sales quota for the past year.

More than 200 men from the company's sales offices throughout the country and from the general offices at Orange, N. J., will meet at Sea Island for a full program of sales discussions and sports.

Excess Reserve Dips 10 Million

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last evening a slight drop in excess reserves during the week ended September 1. These lendable funds dropped $10,000,000 for the week to $750,000,000. The decline was attributed to a $37,000,000 increase in money in circulation to $6,532,000,000.

Excess reserves, which provide the basis for credit expansion, are expected to dip substantially over Labor Day, when money in circulation customarily increases sharply. When money goes out of the banks into circulation, it tends to decrease the institutions' supply of idle funds.

The board reported it increased its Government bond holdings $1,000,000 during the week to $738,073,000. This increase, however, was offset by a $1,000,000 reduction in holdings of Treasury bills, bringing the latter to $630,404,000. Treasury note holdings remained unchanged at $1,157,713,000.

Gold stocks rose during the week $26,000,000 to $12,567,000,000 or $1,850,000,000 over the same week last year.

Total for 22 Cities Shows First Drop in Six Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 2.—Although higher than the aggregate for the preceding week, bank clearings for the current period fell below the comparative 1935 period for the first time in six weeks. The drop was due largely to the fact that in the 1936 total two days of first-of-the-month settlements were included, while this year there was only one day.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended September 1, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, were $5,254,337,000, as compared with $5,842,270,000 for the like week a year ago, or a decrease of 10.1 per cent This contrasted with a gain of 5.2 per cent for the similar comparison last week.

The clearings turnover at New York amounted to $3,216,859,000, against $3,871,534,000 for the corresponding 1936 week, or a loss of 16.9 per cent. Outside of the metropolis, clearings aggregated $2,037,478,000, as compared with $1,970,736,000 in the corresponding period last year, or a gain of 3.4 per cent.

Clearings this week were $494,502,000 more than the total for the preceding week.

Cashier Seized For $250,000 Bank Shortage

Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 2.—J. R. Russell, assistant cashier of the Farmers Bank & Trust Co., hunted on an embezzlement warrant, was arrested this afternoon at Harrisburg, Pa., and turned over to West Virginia State police.

The bank carried Federal deposit insurance for all accounts up to $5,000. Russel's case will probably come before circuit court September 21.

The warrant was issued here Tuesday after the shortage had been turned up by State bank examiner in a routine audit Monday afternoon.

Unofficial information here was that the tip as to Russell's whereabouts came through a letter to his wife here.

The bank remained closed for all purposes except information. Executives bluntly declined to make any estimate of the shortage pending a full audit now in process.

State banking department officials continued in control of affairs, after the directors had voted Wednesday morning to turn administration over to the State. State Banking Commissioner George Ward yesterday took personal charge.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't like to talk about myself but some columnist came out with the statement that I had bought a new car that was so long I had to build an addition onto the garage, and I don't think it's any more than right that I use my space here to deny them charges. I did buy a new car but it's one of the shortest cars made.

In fact I had'ta get a short one so my wife would have room enough to run the washing machine in the garage. I just pretty near had to get a new car because the old one got in such bad shape. I live back off the main road quite a ways and the road going up to my house ain't paved and it's that adobe soil that gets awfully slippery when it gets wet and the radiator in my old car got to leakin' so bad I been driving with chains all summer.

sonal ambition of disloyal associates. William Green has not allowed himself to be deflected from the course which American labor must follow if it is to remain American. He has realized that the chief problem confronting labor in its task of organization is not one of mechanical structure, but of personal worth and American citizenship."

"He has been unwilling to become a Communist organizer. He has refused to allow the disputed question of industrial vs. trade unionism to be so dominant as to obscure the need to keep the federation American. He would not tolerate an alien domination of the American labor movement. He has had no place in his program for sit-down strikes, Communist principles or Communist methods. Our labor movement is American because William Green stepped into the breach when lawlessness was stalking the land under the pretense of a new name."

Green in his message said that "we seek to build America and make it a better America," and "we will have nothing to do with those who would destroy it and its institutions and substitute therefor revolution, dictatorship and autocracy."

"The American Federation of Labor," he said, ". . . seeks to employ reasonable, rational methods in organizing work and in collective bargaining," and that in "the conference room" it is possible to work out amicable settlement of labor disputes.

Dr. Nollner, who has his headquarters in Indianapolis, but maintains headquarters for the movement at the Mayflower Hotel here, declined to reveal names of contributors who have underwritten the 100,000-copy issue of "America Forward."

Mass meetings have been held in 23 States by his organization, he said, listing three towns in Texas alone where 1,000 had attended mass meetings of the organization.

The movement was begun in July, 1936, Dr. Nollner continued, at a meeting with several other clergymen at his home in St. Louis. These clerics issued a call for an Asheville, N. C., conference last August to discuss "radical movements in America, and their effect on the church and the country."

Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, who died last year; Mrs. V. R. Sisson, vice president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and Father John LaFarge, editor of America, were speakers, he went on.

In October, 1936, the organization sponsored a mass meeting in New York, when resolutions were adopted condemning sending of aid to Spanish loyalists, commending the American Legion for denouncing recognition of Russia, and indorsing the State investigation of Communist activity in the public schools.

Discussing prominent persons who are "interested" in his movement, Dr. Nollner, after announcing the articles by Pettingill and Burke for the next America Forward, mentioned Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and former Senator James Watson (Republican), of Indiana.

He said he has talked with them about the movement and "they are interested in our progress."

Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization promised yesterday to reveal in a Nationwide broadcast to night how the C. I. O. expects to "consolidate and further" its "natural alliance" with the farmers of the country.

Lewis also promised to "expose" the forces "arrayed against labor in the strike of the Steel Workers Organization Committee against the independent steel companies."

In this exposure of the "enemies" of the C. I. O., Lewis pledged a full discussion of "public officials who betrayed their trust and used the forces of Government against labor."

This was taken as a hint that Lewis will strike directly at Governors and mayors who used militia and police to keep steel plants open despite C. I. O. strikes. These include Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio and Mayor Dan Shields of Johnstown, Pa.

In discussing the extent of the speech, scheduled as a Columbia Broadcasting System feature for tonight at 9:30, Lewis asserted:

"Despite the concentrated attack on the C. I. O. in recent months, we have expanded our membership as never before in labor history. The C. I. O. has established itself as clearly the majority movement of American labor and I shall make public the present membership of the C. I. O. in my speech and indicate the direction in which American labor, as represented by the C. I. O., is moving."

Meanwhile, Dan W. Tracy, president, Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, an A. F. of L. affiliate, wired Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, in protest against a recent National Labor Relations Board order.

Tracy's protest was directed against an order which called for an election among the 1,600 employes of the National Electric Products Co., Ambridge, Pa.

The election would decide whether the employes wanted to be represented by the American Federation of Labor or the C. I. O.'s unit, the United Electrical and Radio Workers.

The brotherhood already had an A. F. of L. collective bargaining contract with the management of the company.

The United States District Court for Western Pennsylvania had upheld the federation contract and ordered the corporation to comply with closed shop and check-off provisions in it.

Then came the NLRB order voiding the federation contract and ordering an election. William Green, A. F. L. president, and others at once struck at the board ruling,

Balloonist's Diary Found Near Pole

Tromsoe, Norway, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Norkegian iceship Gudrun returned today from the Arctic with a tiny receptacle in which, the captain said, was a "diary" of the Swedish explorer Salomon August Andree, who was lost in an attempt to reach the North Pole by balloon 40 years ago.

The copper and cork container was found on a small island near Spitzbergen by a fisherman. The Gudrun's master declined to disclose the diary's contents. He surmised Andree had dropped the container while passing over the island.

Ten Paralysis Cases Here; 20 Die in Midwest

Chicago Theaters Closed to Children; Disease Delays School Openings.

Ten cases of infantile paralysis have been reported to the District Health Department since August 1, but the lateness of the season lessens danger of epidemic, Dr. C. P. Dauer, of the contagious disease division, said yesterday.

From Chicago came word the most serious outbreak of the disease in years is sweeping the Middle West and southern Canada, with more than 500 cases reported. A score have died.

Of the eight cases reported here in August, three were brought here from nearby States. There was one death. Two cases were reported yesterday. Last year Washington had only seven cases, but in 1935 there were 83.

Toronto reported 19 new cases yesterday. The toll for August has been 15 fatalities in 313 cases. In other parts of Ontario 491 cases were reported, with 12 fatalities.

Detroit reported the worst inroads of the disease in years, and school and health authorities considered delaying opening of schools. Buffalo's schools were ordered kept closed as a result of 18 cases.

Picketing Barred In Union Dispute

Complaining that four of its stores were being unjustly picketed, David and Hyman Zoslow and the Washington Shoe Workers Union yesterday obtained from District Court Justice F. Dickinson Letts an order temporarily halting the picket parade until a hearing October 11.

Those named as defendants, The United Stoe Workers of America, Jack Mink, Frank Pirrone, Giuseppe Sario, Giovanni Pirrone and Vincenzo D'Avanza were ordered to stop picketing until the jurisdictional squabble between rival union groups have settled their troubles.

Zoslow claimed he signed a contract with the Washington Shoe Workers Union and disputed the right of the defendants to picket his store.

Trade Tax Forms At Police Stations

Forms for returns on the business privilege tax are available at all police precinct stations, Tax Assessor Allen announced yesterday. The returns are due to be filed by October 1.

Allen asked that realty and personal property taxpayers call at the District Building for their bills not before the last of September. The tax payments are not due until October.

Aboard S. S. Red Cross Makes Plea To Labor Day Drivers

An appeal for careful driving was made yesterday by the American Red Cross for Labor Day week-end motorists.
